RUSSIANS TURN GUNS ON FINNS

Behind Heavy Barrage Reds Advance Within 36 Miles of Viipuri.

By The Associated Press

MOSCOW, June 13—Backed by terrific gun fire provided by Col. Gen. Leonid A. Govorov, an artillery specialist, Red army mobile units moved steadily over roads and forest defiles deeper into the Karelian isthmus today, reaching points beyond captured Raivola, about 36 miles from Viipuri.

A front dispatch to Izvestia reported the surrendering of many Finns who appeared dazed by the offensive. Raivola, like Terijoki, was not burned. The Finns did not have time to apply the torch.

So rapid was the advance Raivola fell in 40 minutes. But the Finns were reported hurrying many reserves to the isthmus and hard fighting appeared in store for Soviet units just now beginning to reach the hard core of resistance.

(A Finnish communique broadcast by Berlin said the Finns had repelled all attacks against their Karelian defenses, and that 63 Soviet tanks were destroyed in three days.

Helsinki dispatches reaching Stockholm declared rainy, misty weather had set in on the Karelian isthmus, benefitting Finnish

NAZI AIRFIELDS UNDER HAIL OF ALLIED BOMBS

Several Hundred Fortresses Strike Battle Line; Planes Range Far Inland.

By The Associated Press

LONDON, June 13 — Flying Fortresses, several hundred strong, again pounded German airdromes behind the battle lines in France today as Marauders and Havocs struck at targets from the beachhead to far inland.

The German radio indicated allied daylight raiders were striking into the reich from bases in Britain and Italy following a night attack by more than 1,000 RAF bombers against German transport facilities and the synthetic oil manufacturing center of Gelsenkirchen in the Ruhr.

Escorted by Mustangs, Thunderbolts and Lightnings, the Fortresses rained explosives on airdromes at Evreux-Fauville and Dreux - Illieres - L'eveque. Clear weather made possible visual bombing. The Fortresses followed up yesterday's attack by up to 1,400 American heavy bombers against 16 airfields.

Berlin Says Munich Bombed

Berlin said Italy-based bombers struck at Munich.

The Marauders and Havocs attacked railroads, fuel dumps and other targets in close-up support of the beachhead forces.

In a series of broadcasts, the Berlin radio told of heavy air battles raging over the whole invasion area and said allied planes surging over the Alps had penetrated to Bavaria and Franconia. Other daylight raiders were reported in small numbers over western and northern Germany.

Following up yesterday's record assault by 1,400 American heavy bombers, the RAF included in its overnight targets bridges near Caen, center of some of the heaviest fighting in the allied invasion drive, and Cologne in western Germany—an important railway hub.

The luftwaffe, evidently trying to save face after its weak showing in Normandy, sent a few planes over southern and eastern England, and got one lone plane through to London for the first time since April 27.

Night Bombing Continues

The campaign against German transport, which reached a new crescendo yesterday, went on through the night virtually unabated at the hands of heavies, mediums and mosquitos and expanded eastward into the lowlands.

The RAF bombed railroad centers at Arras, Amiens and Cambrai—key points on the route from Flanders to Normandy—and Poitiers, France.

Mediums augmented the assault with a blow at the great panzer marshalling area in the Forest De Grimboso, southwest of Caen, dropping 150 tons on German armored concentrations in a few minutes with great devastation.

They also hit the railroad center at Mezidon, and ferry installations over the Seine at Caudebec, in a continuation of the campaigns against ferries, apparently calculated to prevent the Nazis from staging a successful "Dunkerque" if allied forces succeeded in trapping them.

RAF Loses 23 Planes

The RAF lost 23 heavy bombers in overnight attacks on railroad centers in France and 17 more at Gelsenkirchen and Cologne and in mine-laying.

Four of the medium bombers and fighter-bombers participating in the assaults on the German communication lines were shot down, while allied night-fighters nailed ten Germans. One of the German raiders over Britain was downed.

Previous incomplete reports of yesterday's operations said 53 Germans had been shot down in the air and 17 on the ground. Allied losses were placed at seven heavy bombers, one medium bomber and 31 fighters.

Mosquito bombers that raced back and forth behind the German lines are intensifying the disruption of transport, which SHAEF disclosed last night had been crippled extensively since the D-day buildup began.

Fifth War Loan Is Given Rousing Start in County

Rally Sets Stage for Start of Canvassing Today; Wounded Veterans and Sales Instructor Speak.

Marion county raised the curtain on its participation in the Fifth War Loan with a rousing rally in The Star Auditorium last night.

The rally set the stage for workers to start calling on prospects today. One of the first organized phases of the drive will begin at 7 o'clock tonight when the Civilian Defense bond corps starts to canvass the Marion residential areas, with air raid sirens sounding a signal for the formal start of the evening's work.

Last night's program had just about everything that could possibly be needed to set the stage for a big drive, and the hundreds of volunteer workers who gathered to hear it responded with generous applause and expressions of determination to stay on the job until all goals are reached.

The program had color in the form of bright placards, stirring music by the Harding High school band and the a cappella choir.

It had proof of the need for bonds in the form of two official war films and two wounded soldiers.

It had a religious touch in the invocation offered by Dr. S. M. Ingmire of Epworth M. E. church.

And, finally, it had sizzling salesmanship instruction from Sam Vining, sales manager for an electrical company who has been loaned to the War Finance committee to pass sales tips on to bond campaign workers.

His instructions to the Marion county workers were neither mysterious nor complicated. His primary appeals were to stay on the job until every man, woman and youth in Marion county has been asked to buy bonds, to ask them to buy not only one extra bond but as many as they can, and to analyze war bonds so they could present a convincing sales talk to their prospects.

Thorough Canvass Urged

Stay on the job until you've seen all of your prospects, even though that may require several callbacks, he urged. No campaign can be called complete until the workers have seen every person on their lists, he declared.

Above all, don't guess whether your prospect will buy extra bonds, he continued. "The only way to find out is to ask—ask all of them to buy not one bond but as many as they can. You may get a dozen refusals in a row, but somewhere along the line you'll find a person who will buy more bonds than he originally intended to simply because you have asked him to buy more. That's the fellow we're concerned about, and the job won't be done well until we've uncovered as many of those extra bond buyers as we can." He declared no person can call himself a "bond salesman" if he simply goes to the door and writes out an order for whatever bonds the prospect says he's willing to buy. "You aren't making history when you sell that way—you're just recording it," Mr. Vining declared. "Selling begins at the point where you ask the man or woman to buy more bonds than he or she had intended, and you as a salesman haven't 'gone to war' in the campaign until you start to sell. Don't let refusals discourage you—you will have done your part if you try."

To sell the salesmen on war bonds, Mr. Vining took a dollar bill from his pocket and made some shrewd comparisons of the currency and war bonds, pointing out that selling war bonds is merely a matter of getting people to let loose of dollar bills in exchange for war bonds.

Identical Security

He noted that the picture of the "same guy," George Washington, appears on both the dollar bill and the war bond. On both pieces of paper the government of the United States promises to make good the value represented by the paper. "And if you'll look, you'll see the same signature on both of these pieces of paper," referring to the signature of Secretary of the treasury Morgenthau on both

$77,205 Start Is Made Toward Marion Co. Quota

A $77,205.25 nest egg was placed in Marion county's Fifth War Loan account this morning by a treasury department announcement that all bonds of Series E, F and G—those sold to individuals—since the first of the month will be counted as Fifth War Loan sales.

The treasury department, more concerned with sales to individuals in this drive than those to corporations, also said it will tally only individual purchases of those three series for the first two weeks of the drive. This will emphasize the importance of the individual buyer in the campaign, they explained.

Beginning June 26, business and corporation purchases will be counted in. Banks will be permitted to buy some few issues in the Fifth War Loan, but none of the bank purchases will be credited to the drive totals.

The $77,205.25 reported today represents bonds that have been purchased through payroll savings and other routine channels prior to today's launching of the drive. The figures represents a fraction more than two per cent of the county's Fifth War Loan quota.

TWO YANK COLUMNS ADVANCE HALF WAY ACROSS PENINSULA

By The Associated Press

By The Associated Press

SUPREME HEADQUARTERS ALLIED EXPEDITIONARY FORCE, June 13—The allies in Normandy burst forward mightily on all fronts late today, with the Americans cracking Cherbourg's defenses by seizing three towns and driving advance patrols within 10 miles of the great port.

British troops in a deep-biting powerdrive outflanked Caen, eastern bastion of the 80-mile battlefront, seizing Troarn, nine miles east of Caen.

Along the center of the flaming front, U. S. troops captured Balleroy, and allied forces plunged south of Bayeux in a "big advance" flanking Caen from the west.

4th Division Takes Montebourg

The U. S. Fourth infantry division toppled Montebourg, 14 miles southeast of Cherbourg, and advance patrols pushed on four miles closer to the strategic port.

Two other American columns slashed halfway across the top of Cherbourg peninsula in deepening threats to lop off the port.

One of these driving inland 11 miles near Ste. Mere Eglise captured Pont L'Abbe, only five miles from the west coast railway still in German hands, and 14 miles from the western shore. The other fought beyond Carentan and was roughly halfway across the peninsula at its narrowest, 20-mile neck.

Other Americans captured Le Ham, three miles southwest of Montebourg.

Supreme headquarters described the day's sweeping advances as "very, very satisfactory."

First Big Gain in Area

Fall of Troarn in a seven-mile advance by the British was the first big gain registered in this desperately-defended area since a British airborne division landed there, on D-day a week ago.

The British in another three-and-one-half mile advance won a village on the outskirts of Caen itself.

New airborne troops were dropped in France. The Germans reported airborne landings on the west coast of the Cherbourg peninsula, presumably as part of a pincers to snip off the cape.

The crumbling of Nazi defenses on more than an 80-mile front coincided with unconfirmed reports that Field Marshal Erwin Rommel, the "desert fox," had been removed from his command.

Five landing strips have been constructed and are in use in France, the air forces announced.

American forces seized the road junction of Balleroy, on the edge of the captured Cerisy forest, and nine miles southwest of Bayeux. The Germans reported a developing drive on the communication hub of St. Lo, and said the Americans were only six miles away.

Six U. S. divisions now have been identified as fighting with the powerful invasion armies—with perhaps 600,000 men engaged on both sides—and supreme headquarters reported progress all along the battle front now lengthened to 80 miles.

Berlin declared allied forces were driving on the central Normandy road hub of St. Lo, and placed Americans within seven miles of the town. A front dispatch said the U. S. Second division has struck past Cerisy forest to the northeast of St. Lo, making the deepest inland penetration of 16 miles.

The Fourth division was spearheading the attack below Cherbourg in the area previously entered by the 82nd and 101st American airborne.

The American First and 29th division also are fighting in France.

Estimates by both sides said 600,000 or more men were fighting on the Normandy plains, and the German high command announced the death "in the foremost line" of Artillery General Marcks, commanding an army corps on Cherbourg peninsula.

Town Changes Hands

On the eastern flank, supreme headquarters said Tilly-Sur-Seulles west of Caen had changed hands several times. Berlin reported particularly heavy fighting in this sector, and said a wedge had been driven into Nazi lines east of the Orne river.

The Second division men, bursting into the center of the sagging Nazi line, "still are pushing forward" past Cerisy forest, and captured a huge ammunition dump near the woodlands, a front dispatch said. The Germans were falling back so rapidly they did not even have time for demolitions and placing mines, it added.

Maintaining thunderous aerial support, several hundred Flying Fortresses hammered Nazi airfields in France today, and other planes hit battlefront positions. Rain lowered visibility in the English channel—the allies' sup-

NAZI LINE IN ITALY PIERCED

Yanks Smash German Strong Point in New Defenses North of Rome.

By The Associated Press

ROME, June 13—The Germans north of Rome fought bitterly today along a new line of defenses from Lake Bolsena to the sea but Fifth army troops smashed through and occupied nearly all the western shore of the lake and all but wiped out a strong point east of Orbetello, 71 miles northwest of Rome.

Moving up both sides of Lake Bolsena, allied forces on the western shore captured Valentano, junction of three highways some 55 miles north of Rome and pushed on, nearing Laterna, four miles further north.

Northwest of the lake, south African forces moving toward Orvieto ran into a stiff battle in Bagno Regio.

New Defenses Encountered

On the Tyrrhenian coast American doughboys encountered a new series of dug-in defenses east of Orbetello and attacked through high ground directly toward Jaferal highway 74, which is about 90 road miles from Rome at that point. In a sharp and bloody engagement they captured 142 prisoners from the German 162nd Turcoman division and killed 100 more of the enemy.

The advance was considerably more rapid on the Adriatic sector, where Eighth army troops crossed the Sangro river, some five miles north of captured Pescara, at several places.

These allied forces took Popli on the Rome-Pescara road 10 miles north of Sulmona, where the advance had halted only long enough to take 20 prisoners.

South of Terni in the center of the advance line, the enemy continued to put up a fight but some progress was made there also.

The Eighth army forces in the Tiber valley advanced to the southwest of Carsoli, reaching

THOUSANDS OF BOATS IN THE Army's "Navy"

MORE than 150 different types of boats—15,000 craft in all—will be manned and operated by the Army Transportation Corps by the end of the year.

Many of these boats are built far inland—moved piece by piece by Erie and other American Railroads to seaports.

Carrying this cumbersome, bulky equipment is one of the important jobs of your railroads today. And the fact that the railroads are able to do this makes possible the building of these boats far from the coast.

Boats are just one of more than 200,000 items your railroads must carry for this one branch of the Army alone.

As the need for this equipment, and the thousands of other vital war materials, grows greater and greater, your railroads must carry increasing loads day after day.

With your continued help and the cooperation of shippers and government agencies, we will keep 'em rolling for victory.

23-YEAR-OLD MAJOR VISITS KIN AT WALDO

Maj. John Disbro, Former "Red Raider" Flyer, Home

WALDO, June 13—Major John H. Disbro of Richmond, Ind., who recently returned to the United States from the Southwest Pacific after completing 59 missions, recently visited his aunt and uncle, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Groll of Waldo. Relatives from Marion, Prospect and Waldo visited him at the Groll home.

He is the grandson of Mrs. Sophia Stark of Waldo; nephew of Mrs. Dan Klingel, Mrs. C. C. Conklin, Mrs. Groll and Mrs. Paul Stark, all of Waldo, and Mrs. Russell Sycks of Marion; cousin of Mrs. Harold Young, Mrs. Donald Hedges and John Lauer, Jr., all of Prospect.

Twenty-three years old, Major Disbro was a commander of a B-24 squadron attached to a group called "The Red Raiders." It is the oldest group in the Southwest Pacific area. Until last year this group was the one which had destroyed more enemy aircraft in actual combat than any other bomber group in the Army Air corps. On his first mission he was shot down in the jungles with his crew. He has received the Purple Heart and two service ribbons and is eligible for the Air Medal and the Distinguished Flying cross.

Invasion Weapons

81 mm Mortar

Associated Press Features

Possessed of a high trajectory, the 81-mm mortar is an infantry weapon designed to provide cover and support fire for advancing troops in hilly terrain. It is effective against personnel, vehicles and light emplacements.

Looking like a stovepipe mounted on a bipod, it weighs 136 pounds, hurls three types of high explosive and white phosphorous smoke shells, weighing from 7 to 15 pounds. Its range varies from a few yards to more than two miles and its normal rate of fire is 18 rounds per minute, which can be doubled in emergencies.

A smooth-bore weapon, it is fired by dropping a shell into the mouth of the barrel. A primer in the propelling cartridge strikes against a firing pin in the base of the barrel.

(Tomorrow: The 4.2 Mortar.)

OHIO CROP OUTLOOK GROWING BRIGHTER

By The Associated Press

COLUMBUS, O., June 13—Ohio's crop prospects improved greatly last month because of warm weather and well-distributed rains, the Ohio cooperative crop reporting service announced.

Excellent progress was made by small grains, hay and pasture, the service reported, while wet fields delayed planting of corn and soybeans.

A bumper peach crop was predicted. The forecast was 1,021,000 bushels compared with 300,000 last year and a 10-year average of 744,000.

Other crop predictions:

Winter wheat—22.5 bushels to acre compared to 16.5 last year; hay—best season since 1918; pasture—best since 1922; oats—42,351,000 bushels, 200,000 above the 10-year average.

Poppies Also Grow in Normandy

By ROGER GREENE
AP War Correspondent

WITH THE ALLIED ARMIES IN FRANCE, June 10 —(Delayed)—Battle diary:

In Normandy the poppies grow—millions upon millions of them, blood red and dancing like fireflies in the tall green wheat—but unlike the flowers of Flanders fields immortalized by John McCrae's poem, the poppies here in Normandy conceal mercifully few Allied dead.

On this fifth day of battle we are pushing inland by sheer weight of massed fire power, by land and air, and the hand-to-hand fighting that marked the 1914-18 conflict is comparatively rare today.

The battle of the beaches, bloody enough in its early phases, is over. We have suffered, but not so heavily as might have been expected. This afternoon we moved deeper inland. We have left the chateau of our kindly hostess, Madame La Vicomtesse, whose eyes were bright with tears as she waved us goodbye. Now we are billeted in a cathedral town, with press quarters set up in the former headquarters of a German commandant.

Here again signs of the hasty German departure are evident. Bureau drawers are ripped out and left half full. Food and supplies are on the kitchen shelves, and half-empty wine glasses still are on the dining table.

Tonight I am sleeping in the German commandant's soft, big double bed. My escorting officer, Capt. Sir Charles Birkin, is the best "scrounger" I've seen. He lost all his kit somewhere on the beach on D-day, but now he has two beautiful polished leather cases left behind by the Germans, loaded with such things as a Nazi razor, shaving cream, an extra shirt, a blanket and two bottles of Rhine wine. Within a half hour after we reached this village he turned up slick and gleaming with French shampoo.

I can never forget the look of utter disbelief in the eyes of 11-year-old Charlot, a French boy when I gave him 100 francs for running an errand. In the last four years all he had known were kicks and jeers and barked commands of the German officers billeted on the farm.

Then there was the French girl, about 17, pretty, raven-haired and red-eyed from weeping. I was looking for a table for my typewriter when I came across her in a storeroom. She was lying against a crumpled up mattress staring at a photograph, with tears streaming down her cheeks.

Quickly she thrust the photograph out of sight, but not before I caught a glimpse of it—a bullet-headed young German officer with cold, imperious eyes and a sword slash across the mouth. I saw his body an hour later, half tumbled out of a shell-wrecked car along the road.

Can You Picture OHIO without Transportation?

Public transportation—by highway and skyway, by railway and waterway — is one of the most vital industries of this State of ours. It represents far more than a vast array of terminals, equipment, repair shops and cold statistics about moving manpower — it's the link that joins Ohio's cities and towns and rural communities to each other and to the rest of the Nation. In these tense times, it is the means of bringing boys home on furlough — of getting workers to the war plants — of keeping on the move all those people whose travel is essential to Victory.

An estimated 150,000 of our fellow-citizens of Ohio are hard at work on the 47 railroads and the 5 airlines serving Ohio, on boats, barges, huge fleets of trucks, and on the 221 inter-city bus lines which operate 1,269 buses along 13,885 miles of routes within our State borders. No small share of the credit for the efficiency of this excellent transportation system belongs to the Ohio Department of Commerce and the O.D.T.

We who keep Greyhound buses rolling across our State are conscious of the importance of our particular job — to the whole system of wartime transportation. Without the buses doing their share of the job other transportation would be burdened beyond capacity.

Many of our people today are serving in the Armed Forces — the rest of us are doing our level best to keep essential highway travel safe and efficient.

But we're also thinking about and planning for the post-war days, when pleasure travel will return and when such travel in new and finer Super-Coaches will be a greater pleasure than ever.

MEXICANS LIKE WIDE VARIETY OF CIGARETS

Still Keep 50 Brands on Market Despite War.

By The United Press

MEXICO CITY, D. F. — The Mexican tobacco industry has adjusted itself to war conditions, but it still continues to produce more than 50 brands of cigarets for Mexican smokers, who have at least that many tastes in tobacco.

Mexican manufacturers learned long ago they could not meet market demands by producing one or two brands, so single plants may manufacture 20 or 30 different kinds.

The tobacco industry is one of the heaviest contributors to the Mexican national treasury, contributing approximately 62,000,000 pesos (about $14,000,000 U. S.) annually. One-half the selling price goes to the government in taxes.

Mexican cigarets contain 90 per cent Mexican tobacco, but American, Turkish, Virginia, Cuban and other imported types have been used for blends. With restricted shipping space, it has become more and more difficult to import even the American and Cuban tobaccos.

In spite of the rising cost of production and taxes, Mexican cigarets are among the world's cheapest. One brand of miniature cigarets is sold for seven centavos (less than two cents U. S.) for a package of 20. The luxury kind sells for 50 centavos (a U. S. dime). American-made cigarets cost at least twice their U. S. price in Mexico.

As for the wide variance in taste for tobacco types, tobacco men say the climate is the responsible agent, and Mexico has one of the most varied climates in the world.

A special program to make available about 2,071,000 dozen garments of infants' and children's wearing apparel has been announced by the War Production Board.

Marion Woman's Sister Writes of Meeting Soldiers from This Part of Ohio in Sicily

News came to Mrs. Grace Totaro of 153 Canby court Monday in a letter received from her sister in Licata, Sicily.

Some of the word was good and some was disheartening, for the letter brought word that her parents, Gaetano and Felicia LaMonaco, from whom she had not heard since the Nazi regime came to Italy, were dead.

Brighter news was the record of an experience that the family had with two American soldiers. Mrs. Totaro said her sister explained they were American boys and were from near Mrs. Totaro's home, Marion. No names were included in the letter, and Mrs. Totaro is hoping that the parents of some boys who took part in the invasion of Sicily may have had word of the incident.

Joyous Over Liberation

"When the Americans came, we were looking for one of your boys," the letter said. Mrs. Totaro has a son, James, aviation machinist mate first class in the Navy. "We were so happy when we saw them we kissed the ground where they walked. Thank God we are liberated from the Nazis."

According to the letter, one of the boys recognized a picture of Mrs. Totaro which was hanging on the wall of the house. It also stated that one of the soldiers took a snapshot of her youngest sister's baby. Mrs. Totaro hopes to receive the snapshot.

The letter received Monday and one on Saturday were the first word from her family in three and one-half years. Mrs. Totaro said the Americans had encouraged communication between families, but that the Nazis had suppressed all such activities.

Three Sisters in Town

Licata is on the southern side of Sicily and was one of the first points hit by Allied paratroopers in operations last summer which led to the Italian invasion. Mrs. Totaro explained that the town had escaped serious damage because of its early occupation. She has three sisters living there.

The letter from her eldest sister, Francesca, states that they had not suffered from a shortage of food.

Mrs. Totaro's parents have been dead two years. Her mother died June 13, 1942, and her father March 10, 1943. Her father came to America with Mrs. Totaro and remained here five years, returning to Sicily in 1923. Mrs. Totaro operates the Center Street market on West Center street. Her husband suffered injuries in an automobile accident several years ago and is unable to work.

Marion Man Hears from Parents In Sicily for First Time in Four Years

Dominic D'Amato of 142 South Main street has received word from his parents in Sicily, after a silence of four years.

Through the efforts of the Red Cross, a message was gotten through to his family whose home was in Palermo, and a letter written by them on May 4 was received yesterday by Mr. D'Amato. Welcome news in the letter was that his 88 year old father and 80 year old mother were still alive, living in Bagheria, 10 miles from Palermo, where they had gone in September, 1941, after escaping from Nazi-occupied Palermo.

Three brothers and two sisters are also mentioned in the letter. One brother, whose home was in Genoa, was in forced labor for the Nazis when last heard from in August of 1943. The others are living in small towns around Palermo. His father was a captain in the Italian navy for 33 years. Before the war he was retired at full pay, but when Mussolini rose to power, the pension was cut in half and at the end of six months it was again cut in half.

Mr. D'Amato came to this country in 1921 and has been engaged in the shoe repair business in Marion and Richwood. He started in Marion in the basement of Kline's Department store. He now runs his own business at the South Main street address.

Having spent 21 months in an Austrian prison camp during the first World war, in which he served the Italian army as a major, Mr. D'Amato is well aware of the treatment his family probably received at the hands of the Nazis. He was delighted to hear from them and already is making plans to go to Sicily as soon as the war is over. When asked if he were going back to stay or just for a visit, he replied, "Oh, just for a visit. I am a citizen here, you know. When the war is finished, I go." Mr. D'Amato received his citizenship papers in 1941.

What is HOMOGENIZED VITAMIN D MILK?

Lady—it's the finest Milk You ever tasted!

"That sounds nice, Mr. Jones. But why?"
"Well, Mrs. Smith, with ordinary milk the cream separates, and when you shake the bottle you don't remix it thoroughly, so that most of it is poured off with the first serving."
"Won't homogenized milk act the same way?"
"Not at all. You see, when Borden's homogenize this milk, they break up the butterfat into particles so fine that they are unable to separate and rise to the top. Every drop of milk has the same amount of cream—and the same rich, delicious flavor!"
"So that's what they mean when they say the cream line goes all the way down! You know, maybe that's why I have such a time getting Johnny to drink regular milk."
"Could be, Mrs. Smith. And another thing—it's sure tasty over breakfast food, I know!"
"Well, what is this vitamin D business, Mr. Jones. Doesn't all milk contain vitamins?"
"Sure, but this milk has 400 units of vitamin D added to every quart. And you know Johnny needs vitamin D to build sturdy bones and strong teeth. Thats why doctors recommend Borden's Homogenized Vitamin D Milk."
"You've convinced me. I'm going to try two quarts instead of my regular milk."
"You'll like it, Mrs. Smith. And so will Johnny—and the rest of the family."

Scenes in the above picture from "Home in Indiana," were among those filmed at the Marion county fairgrounds and race track.

"Home in Indiana," racing film, many scenes of which were taken at the Marion county fairgrounds, will have its world premiere at the Ohio theater tomorrow night. Starred in the picture are Walter Brennan, Lon McCallister, Jeanne Crain and Charlotte Greenwood. The grandstand, horse barn and sections of the local track appearing in racing sequences can be easily recognized.

Closing scenes of the picture which records the background and thrills of Little Grand Circuit racing were filmed when the motion picture company was on location here last fall. Marionites who served as extras will have a chance to see themselves as well as horses and well known drivers who were here at the time the film was taken. Tomorrow night's world premiere will mark the start of a 14-day engagement at the Ohio theater.

How Did Father's Day Originate? Answer Finally Produced

How did Father's day originate and who started it?

This question was raised by a Boy Scout group preparing to take part in next Sunday's observation of Father's day. Not able to answer the question for themselves, they appealed to Elmer Bondley of 385 Monroe street. He in turn asked a number of people, all of whom seemed to be in complete ignorance of the answer.

One Marion school teacher voiced the opinion that it must have been started by a men's hat and hose manufacturer. Other opinions were that since mother had a day celebrated in her honor father should have one, too.

Finally W. F. Orcutt, principal of Central Junior High school, became interested in the question and found the answer for Mr. Bondley in the World Almanac. Fathers day was founded in Spokane, Wash., in 1910 by Mrs Bruce Dodd, through the Y. M. C. A. and Ministerial association of that city. In 1936 the National Father's day committee was formed to spread the sentimental spiritual and patriotic observance of the day throughout America.

Lt. Joseph Gunder Wins Another Oak Leaf Cluster

First Lieut. Joseph Gunder, son of Mr. and Mrs. M. H. Gunder of 347 West Center street, has been awarded the oak leaf cluster in lieu of an additional Air medal, according to a release by the public relations officer of the Air Forces in the South Pacific area. The award was made May 25 by Lieutenant General Millard F. Harmon, Commanding United States Army Forces in the South Pacific area, in recognition of Lt. Gunder's meritorious achievements as flight leader from Jan. 24 to April 16, 1944.

A bronze oak leaf cluster is awarded for meritorious achievement while participating in sustained combat operational missions of a hazardous nature during which enemy opposition is met, or during which an area is traversed where enemy antiaircraft fire is effective or where enemy fighter patrols are habitually encountered. The missions for which the award was given were with the 13th AAF.

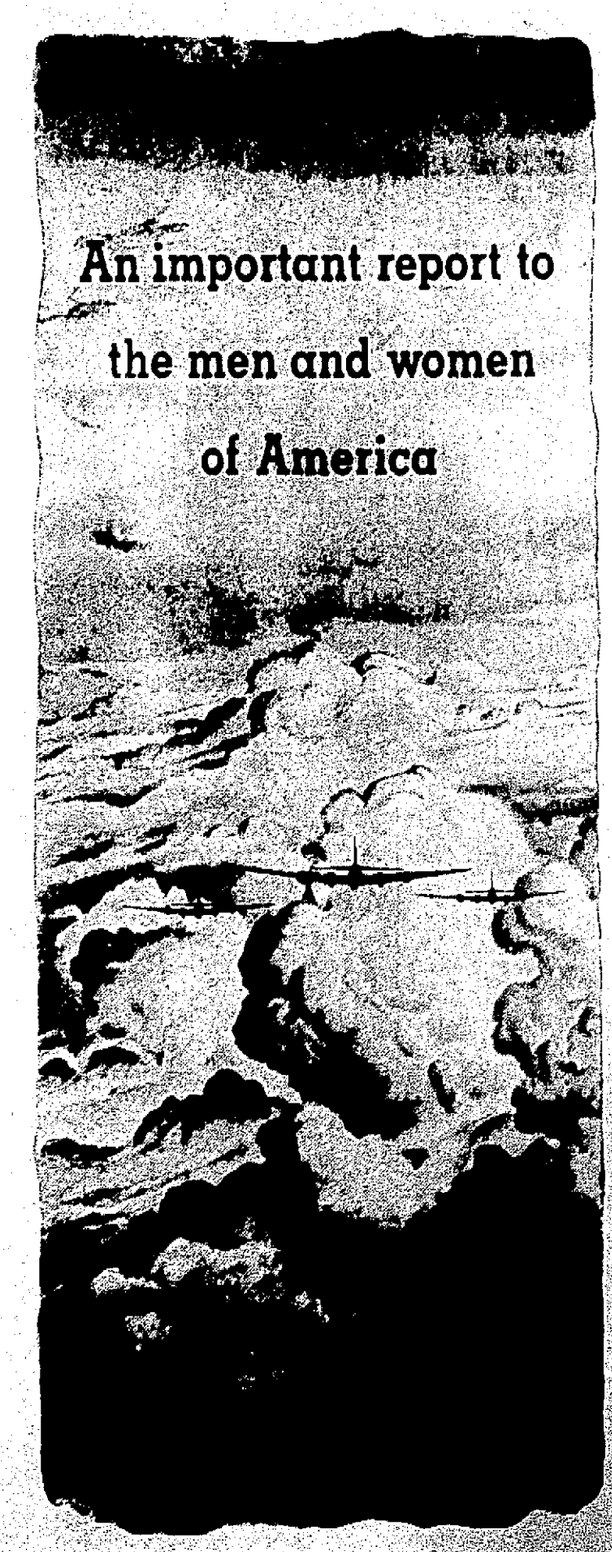
The Story of Ex-Tanes



For 33 months the facts of this report have been withheld from publication for strategic reasons.

During those 33 months, Sohio refineries have been producing a group of highly critical super-fuel ingredients which we call EX-TANES.

EX-TANES are extremely powerful petroleum molecules—power so concentrated that a few cupfuls added to a gallon of high-octane gasoline transforms it into the world's highest grade fighting fuel . . .

Power so concentrated that gasoline stepped up with these "miracle molecules" makes possible as much as a third bigger bomb loads—20% faster climb and 45% greater range for fighter planes.

Before Pearl Harbor, one Sohio plant was equipped for this desperately important job. Today, Sohio's output of EX-TANES flows from all Sohio plants to 10 other refiners in the United States and to our Allies, and all types of Allied aircraft are now powered with gasoline energized by "the added cupfuls" of EX-TANES.

The work of thousands of men and women of Sohio has made this record achievement possible.

We believe that their part in helping to hasten the end of this war—in giving an additional plus in power to our heroic men of the air—is one of the outstanding production stories in Ohio . . . .

Naval Sendoff

THE arrival of the invasion and its subsequent [illegible] made another striking example of [illegible] role in the outcome of the war in Europe. Naval guns made the landings possible, the Navy equipment and skill had transported men and equipment to the beaches. As the fighting moved inland, the Navy supplied much of the heavy artillery needed to clear the path. The naval sendoff for the second front has been one of the most brilliant performances in the record.

Preceding invasion, it was the Navy which opened the way to England for the ships which carried the supplies and men to tip the balance in the favor of the Allies. Naval cooperation between the United States and Great Britain literally made the campaign possible. In the African and Italian campaigns, sea power was the key to every operation, too—and it will be the key to all future operations.

The importance of sea power is obvious now, but it has not always been obvious. Many of us who now take for granted the strength of the United States Navy were so little aware of its importance before war began that its needs were neglected. Its ability to overcome the consequences of neglect and to combine its power with that of the British navy has made the one military factor in World war II which Germany never was able to offset.

President Roosevelt's Health

THE report of President Roosevelt's personal physician that the checkup late last month at the naval medical center showed the President's physical condition was better than that of the average man of 62 will not answer the question which circumstances have raised on the point in question.

It is not pleasant to be forced to think objectively about Mr. Roosevelt's physical condition, but one particular circumstance demands it. If Mr. Roosevelt becomes the Democratic presidential candidate for a fourth time, and particularly if his running mate turns out to be Henry A. Wallace again, the state of his health will be a critical point in the presidential campaign.

A medical opinion that he is in better condition than the average man of his age is inconclusive; the public does not know what it means. It does know, on the other hand, that since March, 1933, Mr. Roosevelt has been bearing the rigors of his office and that last winter he was the victim of a series of winter illnesses which finally forced him to seek respite from the presidential routine. In all probability, he had an experience a 62-year-old man could expect while holding down one of the hardest jobs ever created by circumstances, but the question is whether any man his age—even though healthier than the average—can be counted a good presidential risk, especially in combination with a vice presidential candidate who does not command wide public confidence.

Germans Are Confident, Too

UNTIL the Allies have demonstrated that they are able to maintain and move forward their still tenuous French front, the Germans—militarists and civilians—will have every reason to remain confident.

That is why cautious advisers on the Allied side are warning their people against overconfidence. The real battle in Normandy has not been fought yet. The military operations there are still in the feeling-out stage—the first round.

German leaders warned their people months ago not to expect a first-round knockout. They have made no secret of the strategy of defense against invasion. It calls for initial resistance at the point of attack and the probability that an attack in force will be able to overcome the resistance, whose purpose is to delay the invaders until secondary defense can be organized.

That has been Germany's military project since D-day—organization of secondary defense. The issue now is whether the defense, operating on the principle of attack, will be sufficiently strong to drive the Allies back across the English Channel in a repetition of the evacuation from Dunkirk.

On the Allied side, of course, all this is known and has been taken into consideration. It is obvious that the strategy for dealing with it must call for additional moves to keep the Germans from concentrating on the Normandy invasion. There will be other invasions and threats of invasion. The action in Normandy may become secondary at any moment, or may share the spotlight with some other operation of comparable magnitude.

But until the Allies have established the fact they are able to deal successfully with the ultimate force they must meet in order to maintain a western front, the Germans have a right to feel just as confident of the outcome as the most optimistic believer in Allied success—a fact which should offset the naive and wholly foolish notion that Germany must lose because it has not been able to win the first round of the battle.

News Behind the News

Individual Freedom in Full Sense of Word Seen As First Post-War Goal at Home.

By PAUL MALLON

WASHINGTON, June 13—The unresolved conflict between the four freedoms and radical ideology which is apparent behind the confusing political news from abroad is also conspicuous behind much domestic news and interpretation.

The leftist journals are currently campaigning for the Beveridge proposed "way of life" in Britain, with the critical demand that it also be pursued here. They think that is what the four freedoms mean. Assumption by the state of most complete authority over the lives of men economically, fixing their wages, their employment, their security rather than encouraging the individual to do it himself on his own initiative. That is the kind of peace and post-war planning they want.

But we have campaigned this war through to a point near victory on the basis of bringing liberty and democracy for the individual both here and abroad. Is their thinking now not as confused and as far wrong as it was a few months ago when they were campaigning for a quart of milk a day and labor-wage standards to be fixed throughout the world?

Words Need Defining

What is liberty? What is democracy? What is freedom of the individual? If we do not first decide that, how can there be anything but confusion about post-war planning?

To me, an individual enslaved to a state economically by taxation or otherwise, is no less a slave than if controlled politically. In a dictatorship, his life is no more free than the conscience and ability of the man who happens to be running the state at any given time.

If he has a democratic form, he is still no more free than by whatever degree his president and congress are free from domination by minority class groups and interests. In the religious sense, he is not free if he is dominated by any class group either. Domination by one religion or by atheism is equally far from any democratic ideology.

The radicals see this, but this part of it only. How can they expect anyone to believe domination brings economic freedom when they see so well it does not bring religious freedom. They could not consider the world politically free if it was dominated by one world imperial power, at least no one else would. Oneness domination never yet has achieved freedom or liberty or democracy in any way.

What we would like to have is complete freedom for all peoples in all ways, economically, politically, religiously. This always has proved too idealistic a goal for the world to achieve entirely, but by as clever further progress we make in that direction, the peace will be successful. By whatever measure we compromise it, the peace will fail.

We were driven deeper into what measure of collectivism we already had before this war only to meet failures. The ideal was not voluntarily espoused as the proper way of life. It was not what we wanted. It was what we had to take. Entering the war, we assumed the additional collectivism only for war.

Our course in that direction should be pursued in the post-war peace only to whatever extent it will bring true justice to the individual. The star of individual freedom should never be eclipsed one inch by collectivism as our ideal.

Our success in this war was not due to collectivism but to voluntary democratic cooperation by all hands. To whatever extent labor sacrificed its rights to strike, it expects to get that right back, and so with all of us.

Democratic Cooperation

Internationally we did not win by collectivism either, but by truly democratic cooperation. One nation did not dominate the military decisions of how to proceed with the fighting. This democratic way is working well against a nation which practiced collectivism and preached subservience of the individual to the state.

These are rudiments of simple common sense for peace. If we wish to dispel confusion and plan our way, we must first define our words and understand our goals. We must decide that, internationally or domestically, the star of real liberty must be maintained as indispensable.

We must abhor collectivism as an ideal, and compromise with it reluctantly and temporarily only to the extent truly necessary to bring justice to the individual.

We must abhor oneness domination, totalitarianism, dictatorship, and remember always that an individual enslaved to the state by any means whatever will have no more liberty and democracy than the fluctuating goodness and justice of that controlling force.

Men do not take well that kind of power either as heads of worlds or any of the subdivisions of society including nations, state, counties, cities, or even labor unions.

Today and Tomorrow

Many Political Developments Needed To Clear Way for Pattern of War Against Japan.

By WALTER LIPPMANN

WHILE the general shape of the German war has been fixed and clear since the Moscow and Teheran conferences, the same cannot yet be said of the Japanese war. Great political developments of the utmost military importance must take place before the plan of the Japanese defeat is settled.

We must bear in mind that, though Japan is an island empire, with a navy, her war-making power is primarily the army. Alexander Kiralfy, a leading authority of the subject, tells us that "the Japanese Navy has been a floating wing of a powerful army occupied with offensive operations."

The campaigns of Nimitz, MacArthur and Mountbatten on the perimeter of the new Japanese conquests, are engaging what is probably not more than two-fifths of the Japanese Army and that includes divisions in the Netherlands Indies, Malaya, Indo-China and the Philippines which are not yet in the fighting. The main bulk of the Japanese Army is in Manchuria, China proper, and in the Japanese islands. It is a force at least equal in numbers, though no doubt, inferior in equipment, to all Hitler's armies in western Europe. We cannot count upon the defeat of Japan until this army has been defeated.

To defeat it we must find the means of organizing a superior army on the mainland of Asia. We can bomb Japan from China and from the Pacific islands that we intend to take, and we can blockade Japan from the oceanic side, but we cannot assume that a very strong army can be defeated by sea and air power alone.

Burma Victory Not Answer

Victory in Burma, and the opening of a land route and safer air passage into China, will support our air power in China, but it will not enable us to equip a Chinese army or to bring in British and American armies capable of fighting the main Japanese Armies over primitive communications across the vast distances of China.

As Admiral Nimitz has told us, he and Gen. MacArthur have to neutralize or capture the Philippines and all the Pacific islands in order to reach the China coast; then they have to occupy large Chinese ports before we have a base of operations for the decisive campaign.

The Japanese operations inside China today have for their object, so it would seem, to forestall us, to prevent the Chungking armies from joining us when we reach the coast and to make our landings very difficult.

It is evident at once how formidable an undertaking it is, to say the least, to fight 50 or 60 Japanese divisions in Asia with troops and equipment that have to be shipped from our Pacific coast, from Australia and from India.

It is no less evident that, in the decisive phases of the Japanese war, the role of the two great land powers already in eastern Asia,—namely, China and the Soviet Union—must become of mounting importance.

Because we have landed in western Europe it is now possible to begin to talk a bit about this subject.

In talking about it the Chinese question has to come first. China is blockaded from the outer world by Japan. But within China there is a second blockade enforced by Chiang Kai-shek's armies against the Chinese Communist armies. If we add up the Chungking troops and the Red troops and the Red guerrillas who, as a result of this deplorable situation are not fighting Japan, they may be as much as a million of the best fighting men of China.

Would Divide Allies

Moreover, they are in an area which lies between any part of China where we could hope to land and the area from which the Soviet armies would operate. This Chinese civil war not only immobilizes very large Chinese forces but is a great wedge thrust into any kind of United Nations military front in eastern Asia.

To move north against the Japanese armies we would have to break this Chinese blockade of the Chinese or get entangled in a Chinese civil war. If the Soviets move from the north, they, too, would face the same difficulty and the whole situation would be profoundedly imperiled if we found ourselves tied to the Chungking armies while the Soviets reached out for support among the Chinese Communist armies.

A settlement of the Chinese civil war is, therefore, urgently

What War Bonds Mean at the Front

They're A Magic Carpet

BOND BOMB—War loans buy the block-busters that rain on Nazi Europe and help speed the war's end.

This is the second of a series of articles by Associated Press war correspondents on what war bonds mean to men at the fighting fronts. This one is by William L. Ryan, covering the Pacific who was awarded the Purple Heart after he had been flown from New Guinea when he was struck by gun shell splinters from Jap planes.

By WILLIAM F. BONI
AP War Correspondent

WITH STILWELL'S FORCES IN THE MOGAUNG VALLEY—An order comes from headquarters for you to pick up stakes, head for a new assignment and in cleaning house among the months' accumulation of jungle-molded papers you come across one as yet unfilled request.

It is for a brief story to be used in connection with the new war bond drive.

At first, like any other correspondent, you wonder why anybody need be urged to buy bonds—wonder whether, perhaps, we as a profession have not painted war's picture in enough of its horrible clarity. You wonder that and then you wonder whether the man who buys a bond realizes what share that gives him in the war effort.

When he puts down money for a bond, he doesn't know where it goes except into the war effort. Thus it gives him a share in the war as a whole.

His bond may pay for gasoline that powers a tiny liaison plane which rescues a badly wounded Merrill marauder from the Burma jungle just in time to save his life. It may be in a bomb released from a P-40's wing rack which smashes a Japanese battery and thus weakens the retreating enemy's artillery which has been pounding Chinese infantrymen in the Hukawng-Mogaung valley for almost six months without a break.

That bond may go into a truck which an American Negro boy handles over a road hub-deep in mud or possibly the load of sorely needed medical supplies which that truck is carrying.

It may be represented by the uniform of a gentle, efficient nurse at a forward field hospital or by a carbine which "Uncle Joe" Stilwell slings over his shoulder when this soldier's general takes off on one of his frequent inspection tours of the front lines.

That bond puts you as a buyer aboard an aircraft carrier whose planes bomb Palau or in the bomb bay of a Flying Fortress on a mission over Berlin; in a landing barge scraping the beach on a north New Guinea coast, in a P-51 strafing a Nazi column in Italy, in a torpedo that sinks a Japanese supply ship bound for Rangoon or in a Tommy gun that drops a Jap sniper out of a tree in north Burma.

That bond gives you all the privileges without any of the hazards or the hardships of a fighting war. You needn't slog along through mud that makes each step an effort nor fill your nostrils with the stench of enemy dead. You needn't subsist for days on canned rations nor sleep nights on end in a slimy foxhole. You needn't take cover from strafing by heroes nor sweat out hour-long artillery barrages.

It's a great thing, that war bond—it enables you to fulfill your own vital war job at home and also join acutely in the combat overseas.

"We're in a partnership now, you in industry and we who are fighting. It's a good, working partnership, and we'll keep it going full speed until the last enemy gun is silent.

"But what then? There won't be much more need for fighting men than there will be for guns and tanks. Then you back home must take over and win the peace.

"There are ten million families who have recently tasted good wages for the first time, and never want to see a breadline. There are ten million of us fighting men who want jobs, too. We want worthwhile work to do . . . none of your raking leaves and selling apples. Where will those jobs come from? From nowhere else but civilian business and industry.

"We're counting on you in American business. You'll have to have products and services to offer that people will want to buy, so you can keep us working. We're counting on your having planned this big job. You business men, with your mass production and sales, built the American standard of living far above anything the world knew before. We're counting on your ability to do it again . . . and quickly.

"It seems to us, too, that there'll have to be some changes in government's attitude toward business. In war there's only one kind of product to make, and the men of war know best what should be made, how it must be made, and what to do with it. Business men have proved they can make and move war goods. They deserve a fair chance to do their part toward making the peace a success.

"In peacetime, the decisions are up to the business men. Government controls are necessary in war. But we don't want to come back to an America where almost every detail of our private lives is run by government brass hats. We're fighting because we don't like that kind of life.

"Providing constructive jobs and good products in peacetime isn't a job for government. Government makes a fine cop, but a poor inventor. Government is needed to prevent the minority of crooks from stealing from the majority of honest men, but it has made big mistakes in trying to run whole industries.

"The fact is that no one man or group of men can ever do a good and just job of running a whole country or whole industry in all its details. I think that principle, too, is one of the things we're fighting to preserve. Dictatorship smothers originality, initiative and imagination, as well as freedom. A man has to have a little room to move around in if he's going to do his part to build a better world. He can't do much when he's all tied up with regulations, restrictions, and trick taxes that don't let him build reserves for the future.

"Even if paternalistic government worked, we wouldn't like it. For that kind of control would stifle initiative, prevent opportunity and weaken the will of the people to make progress themselves.

"Ten million fighting men are counting on you, civilian America, to win the peace when your turn comes."

OHIO BANK DEPOSITS INCREASE OVER 1943

By The Associated Press

COLUMBUS, O., June 13 — Fat pay checks have built up deposits in Ohio financial institutions until assessments against them up to June 7 were almost $1,500,000 greater than at the same time in 1943.

William S. Evatt, state tax commissioner, also announced yesterday that the $8,298,635 in assessments against deposits this year were almost double those of the pre-war year of 1939 when they totaled $4,577,384.

Another example of the steadily increasing bank accounts of Ohioans was the fact total taxable deposits, plus a reasonable estimate of non-taxable deposits last Nov. 10 were $5,149,317,500 as compared with $4,150,878,000 at the corresponding time in 1942.

Evatt said $6,646,155 of the tax up to June 7 was assessed against banks. Building and loan associations were assessed for $1,629,078 and credit unions for $23,401.

Although the tax is assessed against deposits it is paid by the financial institutions themselves.

Garden Tips

Crops Keep Best in Garden Soil

By The Associated Press

Victory gardeners whose kitchen refrigerators may be crowded, might remember that the best place to keep vegetables is in the ground. There's no place as good for garden crops as in the soil itself.

Hence, in picking spinach, lettuce, carrots or whatnot, cull only enough for a meal or two and leave the rest alone. True, vegetables may become overmatured if left in the soil too long but they're much better that way than if left in the ice box for several days. Also, they're sure to be in better condition than those which have been shipped to market by truck and then held in the corner store.

Stringless beans, a warm weather crop, are started to good advantage now. The soil is well dried. Even if you've planted some, sow some more now. The old method of sowing seed in hills is a waste of space—especially for dwarf types. Sow in rows about an inch deep, and when shoots are large enough to permit transplanting, shift them to six inches apart.

Plant at 10-day intervals, continuing through late July. Sandy loam is best, enriched with well-rotted manure. Use one quart of seed to 100 feet. Beans produce in from six to eight weeks from seed.

London Sees Finns Out of War in Month

By The Associated Press

LONDON, June 13—As Soviet troops surged ahead in their drive on Viipuri and the Finnish capital of Helsinki, the opinion was freely expressed in many quarters in London today that Finland might be knocked out of the war by the end of this month.

The latest Moscow communique said the Finns were putting up stubborn resistance from prepared positions but had failed to halt the Red army's Karelian offensive. The bulletin announced the seizure of Raivola, about 40 miles from Viipuri, and Kivennapa, about 10 miles northeast of Raivola.

(A Stockhold dispatch broadcast this morning by the British radio and recorded by CBS said the Finns, "worried about the Russian break through," had begun evacuating Viipuri and various regions in the path of the advancing Russians.)

END OF WAR TAXES FAVORED BY BYRNES

By The Associated Press

WASHINGTON, June 13—War Mobilization Director James F. Byrnes, mopping a wide variety of legislation to implement the mobilization plans declared yesterday that war taxes should end with the end of the war.

Byrnes testified before a joint session of a special senate-house committee and a military subcommittee interested in the same topic, asserting: "Today we are prepared for war. But we are not unprepared for peace."

But in all the planning for peacetime, Byrnes said, it must be remembered that we are only on the threshold of the invasion of Europe and Germany's destruction is distant.

Byrnes said the war production board would advise contractors in the next few days that they should place orders now for machine tools they will need for civilian production. Manufacturers will be authorized to make tools whenever plant capacity permits.

the currency and the war bond. 'And we've got 11,000,000 men in service making good the value of that signature,' he declared.

'Some people hang onto these dollar bills and seem to think if they squeeze them hard enough they'll have pups,' he continued. 'The joke is that the dollar bills never have any pups—it's the war bond that has the pups. They have a new litter every six months for 10 years (interest credits are added to the value of the bonds each six months)."

"These people that keep the dollar bills don't know what to do with them. They can't keep them at home for fear they'll burn or be stolen. If they put them in safety deposit boxes, government will still be able to call them into the war if they need them just like they called in the gold. If they take them to a bank, the banker will take them—and what do you suppose he'll do with them? Why, he'll buy war bonds with them. The only difference is that the banker gets the pups and the guy with the dollar doesn't."

Henry Krigbaum presided at the meeting and introduced Mayor H. L. Dowler, who in turn introduced the leaders of the various divisions of the campaign: Elmer J. Schoenlaub, chairman of the Marion County War Finance committee; Robert E. White, chairman of the Fifth War Loan drive; A. J. Loudenslager, chairman of the rural division; R. C. Snare, chairman of the block workers; W. E. Orr, chairman of the Civilian Defense Bond Corps; Harold J. Grigsby, chairman of the payroll savings division; Miss Maud Gorham, chairman of the women's division; Chester C. Roberts, chairman of the industrial and corporations committee; Howard Swink, publicity chairman.

Wounded Seaman's Message

Pvt. Ivan Ralph of Green Camp, who lost a leg in action, and Electrician's Mate First Class Clarence Roth of Cleveland, also wounded in action, spoke briefly. Pvt. Ralph declared that the boys in service only hope the folks at home will "dig, and dig deeper" into their pockets to buy war bonds and keep war supplies flowing. "You never realize how much they help until you get over there and see what's going on," he said. Seaman Roth asserted that "your bonds build the thousands of ships that we need to bring a speedy victory, and your best way at home to back up the men at the front is to buy war bonds, and more war bonds."

troops who now are in process of "stabilizing the front.")

The Russians already were moving down both roads toward Viipuri.

Beyond Raivola they made good progress down the main highway toward Viipuri. Great sectors of the road running along the gulf of Finland from Terijoki to Viipuri was under heavy fire from Soviet guns, an Izvestia dispatch said.

The Russians were blasting their way through deep lines of fortifications, one of the most striking of which was a series of German self-propelled "Ferdinand" guns dug into the earth.

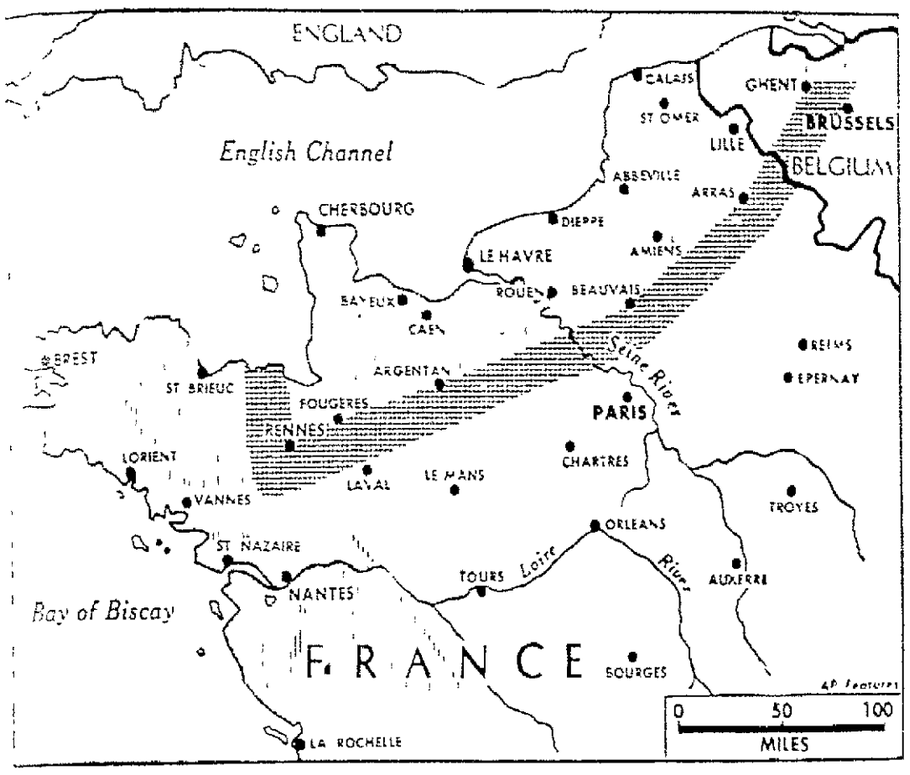
Nazis Depend on "Rommel's Reception Line"



NAZI "DO OR DIE" LINE. Here is the line, says War Correspondent Larry Allen, where the Germans are determined to hold the allies. Set behind the Nazis' coastal defenses, and from 20 to 60 miles from the coast, it bristles with heavy fortifications.

Larry Allen just repatriated by a German prison camp [illegible] the Spanish civil war, correspondent in Rome [illegible] 1940 the first correspondent attached to the British fleet, won the Pulitzer [illegible] stories of the famous [illegible] of the aircraft carrier [illegible] and other Mediterranean engagements, was torpedoed [illegible] times, sunk three times, and [illegible] by the Italians in an [illegible] raid on Taranto in [illegible] 1942. The Germans [illegible] on the collapse of Italy [illegible] was in a Nazi prison camp [illegible] months where, from the [illegible] the Berlin radio and [illegible] German home press, he [illegible] what was happening to [illegible] any both at home and at the [illegible] Here he analyzes what the [illegible] face in their invasion of [illegible] Western Europe.

The world may know within a fortnight how long the war in Europe may last.

For Germany's high command says the supreme test will come when the Allied armies hit the "Rommel Reception Line."

That's the name given to the great position upon which Nazi Germany bases her hopes of repulsing or holding the Allied invaders.

It's the "Second Atlantic Wall."

As I got the picture from Germans and the German press while in a German prison camp, this is a powerful chain of "command forts" stretching from Ghent in Belgium to Rennes, due south of Cherbourg. This was the area in which the Germans expected attack, but at Rennes the line presumably connects with Brittany peninsula defenses.

I cannot say positively that it was not propaganda, although it did not fit the usual pattern of campaigns to boost home morale or confuse the Allies, but here is how the Germans described the line:

It is composed of vast underground, heavily fortified defenses, bristling with thousands of heavy caliber guns and mazes of anti-tank traps.

The line at no point is less than thirty miles and no more than 60 miles inland from the Atlantic Coast.

It runs from Ghent to Arras, Beauvais, thence slightly west of Paris along the Seine river, thence southward to Argentan and finally Rennes as the southernmost end.

A few weeks before the Allies stormed the "fortress of Europe" General Field Marshal Erwin Rommel thoroughly inspected the "second Atlantic wall."

He told German newspapermen:

"Here the enemy shall not pass.

"This will be the supreme and crucial test. Every one of these positions must be and will be defended to the last man."

Rommel, ace master of defense for Nazi Germany and nicknamed "the desert fox" because of his brilliant exploits in North Africa, is supported in this view by Western Commander General Field Marshal von Rundstedt.

There is little question but what one of the biggest showdowns and the first real test of power will come when the Allies smash against this line.

It's Germany's "knock down and drag out" barrier.

Even Reichsminister for Propaganda Dr. Paul Josef Goebbels, writing in his newspaper, Das Reich last month, finally admitted that "we cannot stop the enemy from landing but we can and we will stop him after he has landed."

Germany's "Second Atlantic Wall," with much accent upon its alleged impregnability, has been [illegible] news in German newspapers ever since the [illegible] of Sicily.

Every German appeared to be convinced that it is in the "Rommel Reception Line" that the Allies must smash through. Adolf Hitler, they say, has given the original "Sacrifice Order" to bring them to major headquarters.

No German I have seen appears to be seriously worried about these possibilities. To them, Reichsmarshal Adolf Hitler is still unconquered by the Divine and unless [illegible] shows otherwise, they think Hitler knows the answer.

Germany's crack air, naval and army [illegible] strategists, in articles [illegible] the Allied chances of success, have declared that they must secure at least two good [illegible] as Le Havre and Cherbourg within two weeks after the initial assault, or their attack is doomed to failure.

These same strategists said that if the two weeks after the invasion starts, the answer will begin to crystallize as to whether the Allies can smash Germany's military power, or will crash against an "unbreakable" line of steel, and be stalemated, as at Cassino, in Italy.

And if the latter should happen the Nazi High Command believes that the worst that could possibly happen to Germany [illegible] emerge with a negotiated peace—and that, in a German opinion, would be tantamount to victory.

necessary in order to lay a solid foundation for the decisive phase of the war against Japan.

We may hope that Vice President Wallace who in conformity with the strategic realities is proceeding to China via Soviet Siberia, will be able to make this clear in Chungking, and that all the resources of our diplomacy will be employed to promote a settlement.

Upon this depends not only the development of the strategic plan of victory but also the possibility of a world settlement, for the unity we have achieved, as a result of Teheran and Moscow, is confined to the western world and even that is not perfected, and will not be until Marshal Stalin makes an agreement with Poland and President Roosevelt with France.

In the eastern world there will obviously be no general international settlement unless the war with Japan is concluded with the active participation of the Soviet Union and of a united China. The new international order would simply not exist for more than half the population of the earth if the war for the domination of Asia ended with the Soviets neutral and China rent by civil war.

Blitzed Coventry Is Born Anew

By International News Service

PHILADELPHIA — Coventry, ancient Midland England town which was pummeled for 11 hours in November, 1940 for Goering's Luftwaffe, has been reincarnated and is progressing today as never before, according to Sergt. Frank Burke of Philadelphia.

Burke, stationed somewhere in England, wrote to his former associates in the Philadelphia bureau of International News Service, that the 11th Century town, all but wiped off the map during that raid, has been reborn almost entirely.

City Very Much Alive

Describing a recent visit to Coventry, Burke said:

"Newspaper accounts told how the storied city of Godiva and peeping Tom had been razed flat, leveled, decimated by the flying hordes. Maybe it was, but a visit to the scene now doesn't reflect that picture. Coventry has led in War savings—equivalent of our war bonds—it's alive, progressing—and the cafes and pubs beckon as of old. Perhaps she's the good answer to the question 'Can you bomb a city out of the war?'

Parks Hide Damage

"Some evidence of damage is evident everywhere in the city. Much of the bombed-over land has been paved or otherwise beautified, so that the visitor remarks on the large number of 'parks' in Coventry. In some places the basements of structures remain—cluttered cellars bearing such incongruous items as old rubber tires, girdles and bowler hats.

"Sorriest sight in the city is the Coventry cathedral, destruction of which stirred the citizens fully as much as the ruin of their own homes. Built long ago by the Count and Countess Godiva and since rebuilt it fell to German bombs almost completely, but not quite.

"The tall gray spire housing the bell tower and four skeleton walls remain. But the [illegible] still chant, as I people stand [illegible] pray in a they are now here. [illegible] An altar and a charred wooden cross made of materials salvaged from the wreckage form a new sanctuary—with the open sky for a roof. Sooner or later a new Coventry cathedral will rise from the ruins.

"Just a short walk from the cathedral are two other tragic victims—a huge hospital and an orphanage smashed beyond repair. It's not pleasant to imagine how many occupants of the structures bore the brunt of one of the most savage assaults in history. It's not pleasant, either, to ask yourself 'What if this had happened to Bellevue hospital in New York or St. Anges' in Philadelphia?' Every American soldier talks about that in Coventry although he may not want to talk about it.

"It's a relief to turn to the lighter side of Coventry—it's connection with Lady Godiva, the last 'strip tease' artiste with a horse [illegible]. Nobody in town can tell you how the lady's ride [illegible] Sand, Count Leofric was [illegible] taxing John Q. with heavy taxes. LEADERS VISIT BATTLE ZONE

By The Associated Press

SUPREME HEADQUARTERS ALLIED EXPEDITIONARY FORCE, [illegible] Prime Minister Churchill, after visiting the world's greatest invasion armada, spent [illegible] hour of his visit to the battle [illegible] Normandy coast and Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower, supreme allied commander, who toured American-held sectors of the battlefront with the top commanders of the United States armed forces.

Eisenhower's companions on the inspection yesterday were Gen. George C. Marshall, U. S. chief of staff; Adm. Ernest King, commander-in-chief of the U. S. fleet; Gen. Henry H. Arnold, chief of American air forces; Lt. Gen. Omar N. Bradley, commander of American ground forces in France, and Rear Admirals Alan G. Kirk and Don Leslie Hall, commander of American naval task forces for the invasion.

Churchill steamed to France in on the destroyer H. M. S. Kelvin, which used its guns enroute to bombard a German position ashore. With him went Field Marshal Jan Christiaan Smuts, premier of the union of South Africa, and Gen. Sir Alan Brooke, chief of the imperial general staff.

During his visit ashore Churchill had a chance to see that this, too, is "a very dangerous war," as he once said about the last one. He watched a dog fight in the air and saw a German plane shot down.

The prime minister was ashore three hours. He lunched with Gen. Sir Bernard L. Montgomery, commander of allied ground forces, watched troops and supplies being landed, then steamed home through a battle fleet whose guns even then were blazing away at German positions on shore.

(Eisenhower and his companions, beaming broadly, made a comprehensive tour of American sectors, including battered Isigny, wrested from the Germans only two days previously. They returned to Britain on an American destroyer.

U. S. AIRMEN HACK AT PHILIPPINE PATH

By The Associated Press

American sea, air and ground fighters are tirelessly hacking away at Japanese fortresses barring the way to rescue of the Philippines and hard-beset China, allied reports showed today.

Nimitz-MacArthur airmen, flying from land and carriers, continued their assaults on the string of enemy-held islands stretching from Palau into the Marianas group flanking the Philippines on the east. Adm. Chester W. Nimitz reported the second straight day of attack on Guam, Tinian, Saipan and other Marianas islands by a powerful carrier task force. Details were hidden in radio silence.

Gen. Douglas MacArthur's airmen, taking off from newly-captured New Guinea bases, struck at Palau—530 miles from the Philippines—and Truk for the second straight day.

MacArthur's allied forces also expanded their Biak island holdings against stubborn enemy resistance and, to their rear, maintained steady attacks against Japanese trapped on islands stretching for 1,500 miles from Bougainville to Dutch New Guinea. Casualties in Dutch New Guinea, MacArthur announced, have accounted for 6,705 Japanese in recent weeks. Bombers kept up their daily schedule with an attack on Rabaul in New Britain.

In India allied forces chased the enemy back near the Burma border and claimed victory in the battle for Kohima and were nearer full seizure of Myitkyina in northern Burma. Chinese forces pressed on toward Myitkyina against stoutly-resisting Japanese in the Salween river sector.

Put Port in Repair

It was announced by the allied naval command that a port party was established at Civitavecchia June 9 to begin restoring the facilities which had been battered heavily by allied bombing and enemy demolitions. Many mines have been swept up from the coast from Anzio northward.

Last night RAF bombers swept over Hungary and attacked the Almas-Fuzito oil refineries near Komarom, northwest of Budapest, starting large fires.

Yesterday tactical aircraft hammered transport and other targets in the battle area and further north to impede the German withdrawal. The Mediterranean air force flew about 1,100 sorties in all.

Sunshine Over Channel Gives Invasion Lift

By DEWITT MACKENZIE
Associated Press War Analyst

The burst of sunshine over Hitler's Atlantic wall and the English channel during the past 24 hours has given a fine lift to the allied invasion, which came so close to disaster in its inception and had been terribly handicapped ever since, because of the vagaries of a dyspeptic weatherman.

The great allied beach-head on the Cherbourg peninsula is so well established that even yesterday allied headquarters was able to say the general situation was "better than satisfactory." (I like the note of reserve in that official thumb-nail summary. It expresses confidence but doesn't burble.) We now have an eighty mile front with a maximum depth of some eighteen miles.

A Good Start Made

That strip of coast—won by so much gallantry and sacrifice and superb generalship—is of course still more shallow than we like. However, it's deep enough so that the allied troops are increasingly able to take the initiative, despite the great advantage the Hitlerites held at the outset in their powerful defenses. In short, we are getting ahead with the job, and if the weather-man will favor us, our Normandy victory garden will flourish.

One of the most important developments produced by the appearance of the sun was the really terrific combing which the allied airforces have been giving western Europe. Yesterday some 10,000 sorties were flown by American and British warplanes. They blasted bridges, communications, troop movements and what not. It was a field day.

Now the significance of this is that they were blocking the movement of German reinforcements and supplies to the Cherbourg peninsula. They also were disrupting the lines of approach to the potential invasion points at which the allies may strike at any time. The German airforce showed up in greater strength than at any time since the invasion—but it was a weak display.

This intensified allied air attack emphasizes a vital point which we should keep in mind. The reason we are able to invade western Europe through Hitler's powerful defenses is because of two things.

The allies have vast air superiority; they have vast sea superiority.

Different Story Possible

Had the Hitlerites been able to challenge us heavily on these two cardinal points, there would have been a different story. It might easily have had a bad ending for this greatest amphibious invasion attempt of history. Certainly there would have been a battle so destructive as to appal the world.

Hitler's lack of air power is his most dangerous immediate weakness, as is being well exemplified in the fighting on the peninsula. Not only has Nazi Field Marshal Rommel been handicapped in actual battle, but he has been unable to protect troop and supply movements to the peninsula, for despite the bad weather the allied fleets have performed a wonderful service. The result is that Rommel has lost invaluable time in hitting the invading forces when they were in their most dangerous position.

The German luftwaffe in western Europe is reported to consist of some 1,750 fighter planes and maybe 500 bombers—a mere handful compared with the 11,000 warplanes which the allies have announced they are using. Probably the Nazis are holding their depleted fleet for some crisis which they fear. To have flung it into the battle of Cherbourg would have meant its annihilation.

In any event, we now know that they can't challenge allied superiority in air and on sea, and that means they can't halt the ultimate establishment of a second front, although they may have their local successes.

Yanks Crack Cherbourg Lines

One Berlin broadcast said the signal "for starting the obviously impending battle for Caen has not yet been given on either side," but that both the allies and Germans were bringing up "special units." The town of 61,000 population is the eastern bastion of the German Normandy line.

Supreme headquarters in its 153d communique—1 small allied gains were registered in all but one sector, at Tilly-Sur-Seulles, where strong resistance continued. The Germans were said to have brought up armored reinforcement.

Push Past Carentan

American doughboys pushed on across the neck of the Cherbourg peninsula for some miles beyond newly-captured Carentan, possession of which, the communique said, "materially strengthens the link established between our two major beachheads."

The morning allied bulletin made no mention of progress in the vicinity of Montebourg, but the German-controlled Paris radio said this important highway town, only 11 miles below the port of Cherbourg, now is in allied hands. Americans previously were said to have clamped pincers on two sides of the town.

Rommel was reported concentrating fresh troops around St. Lo, target of American forces driving southwestward from the Cerisy forest, fully occupied yesterday by doughboys who there reached a point 18 miles or more from the landing beaches.

German reinforcements also were rushing up the west coast of the peninsula toward Cherbourg to halt the American drive toward the opposite shore from the Carentan and Montebourg areas.

Very heavy tank battles continued in the British-Canadian sector on the allied left flank.

It was estimated here that a fourth of the entire German western front strength of 60 divisions of more than 1,000,000 men now have been thrown against the American, British and Canadian forces.

The enemy high command was said to be relying on a patchwork defense, a policy of throwing in reserves at the most threatened points—a clear indication, supreme headquarters said, that the Germans do not know allied strategy and fear other strong offensive thrusts and new landings.

Strike At Nazi Reserves

The allied air forces struck to halt the flow of German reserves, particularly into the Cherbourg peninsula, by knocking out a key bridge at Pont Au Bault near the west coast town of Avranches. This bridge feeds the St. Lo area as well as the part of the peninsula remaining in German hands.

Photographs showed severe damage to seven of 16 enemy airfields back of the fighting zone attacked yesterday by a record force of 1,400 American heavy bombers. The air campaign against German transport surged on through the night, with British bombers hitting railroad centers on key points on the routes to Normandy.

The comparatively feeble challenge presented by the German air force in the past 24 hours has resulted in destruction of 74 of the enemy planes for a loss of 66 allied craft.

German E-boats were active in the English channel last night, but in less strength than on the previous night, and their attempts to break into the traffic lanes of the big allied convoys were frustrated.

The wind freshened to a strong breeze off shore during the night, but it did not interfere with unloading of supplies and troops on the beachhead.

The battle itself appeared to have entered a light breathing spell during which the allies can gather their second wind while building up for a stronger thrust. This seemed particularly true of the Americans on the western flank, who have been fighting hard for several days.

The British have been locked with the Germans in a desperate battle around Caen since the original landings just a week ago this morning. The Germans are devoting their main defensive effort in this area by using most of their armor.

Seine Ferries Bombed

Among a score of targets attacked last night by more than 1,000 British heavy bombers were bridges near Caen. Mediums augmented the assault with a blow at a great German tank assembly center in the Forest De Grimbos southwest of Caen, showering the area with 150 tons of bombs. Ferry installations across the Seine also were attacked.

"The fusion of our beachheads is now complete," said communique No 14, issued last night, "and a coastal strip some 60 miles long is firmly in our hands. Its depth is being increased steadily."

American tanks and infantry ply line—and the sea was choppy. blasted out the greatest penetration—an inland thrust of some 18 miles—by driving the enemy from the whole of the forest of Cerisy, back from the center of the Normandy beach battle ground and striking onward to-ward St. Lo, German communications hub.

On the allied eastern flank, British and Canadian forces ground out slight advances, parallel with Caen, and last night's communique said fierce fighting continued between British and German tank concentrations between Caen and Tilly-Sur-Seulles.

(A BBC broadcast heard this morning by the Blue network said three German tanx divisions had been thrown into the fighting around Tilly-Sur-Seulles which, the broadcast declared, has "changed hands several times.")

German broadcasts acknowledged that allied air power—which yesterday sent a record force of 1,100 American Flying Fortresses and Liberators against a belt of 16 enemy airfields back of the fighting lines—had delayed the arrival of reinforcements for the Atlantic wall defenders.

An allied announcement said this was true—that "the enemy has been unable to build up his attacking forces as rapidly as anticipated." Headquarters, however, estimated that 14 or 15 divisions, totally 250,000 men, now are in action.

Yanks Win Key Roads

Capture of Carentan, six miles from the sea and a third of the distance across the neck of the Cherbourg peninsula, placed American troops in that sector in fair way to seal off an 800-square-mile area to the north. A number of important roads have been won by the Yanks.

The Germans declared they withdrew from Carentan to get away from allied naval guns—including those of the U. S. Battleships Texas and Nevada. In a similar vein, seemingly trying to explain the German reverses to those at home, a Berlin radio commentator declared the German commanders "apparently are trying to lure the allies away from the covering screen of heavy naval guns."

"Allied warships have been giving deep supporting fire in the center and close support on the flanks of our armies," supreme headquarters announced in its communique last night.

An official headquarters announcement last night said the allies have taken more than 10,000 prisoners. Gen. Sir Bernard L. Montgomery, allied ground commander, said a number of regular Japanese soldiers were among the captives—but there was no immediate explanation of their presence in the midst of the European fighting.

TEXAS REVOLT GOES TO COURT

Convention Delegation Question Up for Decision; O'Daniel Under Investigation.

By The Associated Press

As the much heralded southern Democratic revolt took a route turn in Texas, Gov. W. Lee O'Daniel of the Lone Star state emerged as the central figure of what is called a "new" attempt by the senate campaign expenditures committee.

What aroused O'Daniel was a committee decision to inquire into the financing of a proposed personal newspaper which promises to be strongly anti-administration.

O'Daniel told a reporter it is no secret that more than $100,000 has been collected from prospective $3-a-year subscribers toward financing the paper, which he added would "disseminate the truth about our own government as I see it from the standpoint of a United States senator in Washington."

Action Pleases O'Daniel

O'Daniel, a Democrat who has fought many administration proposals, obviously was pleased with the action of the Texas Democratic executive committee in voting 36 to 6 yesterday against certifying on the primary ballot the names of presidential electors chosen by a pro-Roosevelt group. This group had balked after the regular convention had instructed the party's 23 electors not to support the presidential nominee unless certain conditions were met by the Chicago nominating convention.

With this decision headed for a ruling by the Texas supreme court, O'Daniel predicted defeat there of the pro-Roosevelt faction.

O'Daniel's personal war with the administration found another critic of the New Deal, Sen. Harry F. Byrd (D-Va.), keeping quiet about a proposal that his name be linked with that of Gov. Bricker of Ohio on a coalition ticket. Byrd's influence with the Virginia delegation yet to be chosen will be strong and members might want to put his name before the Democratic convention as a presidential candidate.

Political firing was heavy all along the national front, with Chairman Sidney Hillman of the CIO political action committee coming before the senate campaign expenditures committee to discuss the activities of his group.

Race Question Raised

Wendell L. Willkie, in his series of articles on what the Republicans should advocate, devoted his current one to the Negro question, saying the party should commit itself to federal anti-poll tax and anti-lynching statutes.

There was no answer forthcoming from Albany, meanwhile, to a demand by Senator Hatch (D-NM) in the senate yesterday that the Republicans pick a candidate who "would forthrightly state his position on the issues of the day."

Hatch told reporters he was referring to Gov. Thomas E. Dewey of New York. Off the floor he had a good word for Bricker, observing that Bricker had made his position clear on all issues although the Democrats couldn't agree with his stand on most of them.

ASKS KNIGHT TRIAL AT KENTON SOON

Special to The Star

KENTON, O., June 13—Prosecuting Attorney Rex W. Hanna of Kenton today filed a motion for immediate trial of Richard Knight, 38, indicted for the murder of Loyal W. Bean, Dunkirk grocer, in a hold-up 10 years ago. His action followed almost immediately receipt of an entry from the Third district appellate court refusing to grant Knight a writ of habeas corpus on grounds he had been held continuously in prison for more than two consecutive terms of Hardin county common pleas court.

Declaring that the recent Second district appellate court ruling (at Columbus) which declared a life term sentence wholly void did not in any way affect the indictment or the proceedings in the case. Third district jurists said that the indictment and other proceedings should stand as if there had been no sentence.

Knight was freed from Ohio penitentiary on a writ which set forth he had been sentenced illegally, on a plea of guilty to first degree murder.

Richardson, who had just returned from headquarters of allied Air Forces [illegible] said in one instance [illegible] American enlisted prisoners, stripped to the waist, with their heads bound, were found in a heap beside the wall of a former German command post.

"There is every indication," said Richardson, "that these Americans were executed after they had been captured, in violation of the rules of war."

In a second case the body of a second lieutenant was found with his throat cut and a German army knife beside him. Richardson said that according to the men of the command post who discovered the body, the officer "landed in a tree and was murdered as he hung helpless there."

A third case concerned a major who was found in a village "dead of multiple stab wounds," Richardson declared.

Openings Held At City Playgrounds

Generally good turnouts were reported during the opening hours yesterday afternoon and evening of city playgrounds under supervision of the Marion Recreation commission. Supervisors were at their posts yesterday to greet children and young people visiting playgrounds at five schools and two city parks.

2 NEW INCENDIARY WEAPONS DISPLAYED

By The Associated Press

BAYWAY, N. J., June 13—Sticky gobs of burning jellied gasoline that can ignite almost any inflammable enemy structure it splatters from a fire bomb and an improved flame thrower were demonstrated today by the chemical Warfare service of the Army.

The two weapons designed to spread flaming terror and destruction were shown along with a smoke generator which spouts clouds of a fog intended to hide advancing troops from enemy gunners. Two quarts of its fuel will blanket a city block.

The flame thrower with its "gel gas" fuel instead of a liquid, sprays burning goo three times as far as a liquid-fed weapon.

The incendiary bomb, unlike magnesium bombs, is not wasted if it falls on barren ground, but instead can hurl a similar splatter of fire as far as 100 yards from its point of explosion.

The flame thrower shoots a virtual rod of fire that is effective up to 180 feet, as easily aimed as a garden hose.

Speaking last night on a nationwide radio program officially opening the $16,000,000,000 bond campaign, most of which [illegible] raised here, the President said [illegible] have a long way to go." They [illegible] declared the United Nations [illegible] strategy of defeating Germany first and then throwing our full strength into the Pacific can hasten the day of victory for our offensives "all over the world."

Secretary of the Treasury Henry Morgenthau Jr., who spoke from the federal building of this Texas and Arkansas border city, said the [illegible] on the wars cost by year's end would be $205,000,000,000. Texarkana was chosen as the focal point of the campaign opening [illegible] president's position on the line of the states.

"We" still be $57,000,000,000 short," Morgenthau said "and this is why we're going to have to borrow from you."

The President, describing Japan's plight, asserted we have reduced Japanese shipping by more than 3,000,000 tons and have cut off from their homeland tens of thousands of Japanese troops "who now face starvation or surrender."

Germany, he said, "has her back against the wall—in fact three walls at once"—on the south, in central Italy; on the east, where our gallant Soviet allies have driven the enemy back from lands which were invaded three years ago" and where "great Soviet armies are now initiating crushing blows;" overhead, where the German fighter force "now has only a fraction of its former power," and on the west, where "the hammer blow which struck the coast of France last Tuesday morning was the culmination of many months of careful planning and strenuous preparation."

STEWART TO MAKE NOMINATION SPEECH

By The Associated Press

COLUMBUS, O., June 13—Bricker announced yesterday that James Garfield Stewart, mayor of Cincinnati and Republican nominee for governor of Ohio, would make the nominating speech for him at the national convention this month.

The governor said he was not yet ready to announce who his floor manager would be.

Stewart, who is not a delegate to the convention, is recognized as an outstanding orator. There will be four short "seconding" speeches, but the governor did not say who would deliver them.

Back from New York where he made two radio apeparances last week, the governor said he would submit to the convention's resolutions committee June 23 a report of the postwar committee on industry, enterprise and employment of the governors' conference. Bricker is chairman of the committee.

STORIES OF FASCIST CORRUPTION TOLD

ROME, June 13—Corruption within the fascist regime in Italy, it is now becoming apparent, was even greater than the most rabid anti-fascists have averred.

This corruption undoubtedly was the prime cause of the poor showing which Italy made in the war, and it increased as the war progressed. The full story is now beginning to come out, for many ex-fascists are only too ready to tell all about it and implicate a few old friends who did them wrong.

Italy apparently went to war with a badly disorganized and ill-equipped army. It did not have the "eight million bayonets" about which Benito Mussolini boasted, and much of its equipment was defective due to graft all along the line.

According to one ex-fascist, the fascist setup was so corrupt that even Mussolini himself was a victim. On one occasion when the former duce was making a tour of military airfields, this informant asserted, planes were rushed from one field to another and new numbers quickly painted on them to give Mussolini the impression he was seeing a lot of different aircraft when in reality he was seeing the same ones over and over again.

Even conscription was said to have been rotten. Although all able-bodied men of military age were supposed to have been in the armed forces, one could have himself recorded on the records as "deceased" for a bribe of about 20,000 lire (about $1,000) and thus escape the draft.

ABOUT ANYTHING

In and Around Marion

War Towns

As the war progresses, spelling and pronunciation of names seem to become more difficult. First came in France. That wasn't so good for our spellers, and everyone had his own way of saying names of towns and rivers. Add to that bomber targets in Germany, Russian and Polish objectives, names of the South Sea Islands, and towns in Italy. Who hasn't had just a bit of trouble upon first seeing Zhitomir, Bayeux, Dnepropetrovsk, Gdynia, Djedeida, Ponape, Wilhelmshaven, Darmstadt, Castelvetrano, and many others? Heaven help us if there is ever a major war fought in Wales. For example we give you Llangollen, Llanrwst, Llandrindo, Llanbrymawr, Llandrhaiadr yn Mochnan, Dirmllaan and Ynis Enlli. See what we mean?

No Joke

One Marion girl was almost too honest for her own good recently. Her employer agreed to pay a bonus for extra work and had distributed the checks to most of the employes. The cashier happened to be out at the time, so her check was placed in the cash register where she would be certain to find it. She found it all right, but figured it a joke with a string attached so she turned the check over and wrote this message to the head man: "Listen here boss, the next one of these I find I'll be mean enough to go over to the bank and cash it." She signed "Your little helper" at the bottom and placed it on the boss' desk. When fellow-workers told her it was on the level she was terrified that her inscription would make the check invalid. Things straightened out though and she was given a new check which she signed quite quickly—and correctly.

Dressing on the Way

We've often seen women repairing makeup or adjusting the final bit of clothing enroute to the office but today we caught a man pulling that trick. The manager of a downtown store took advantage of the red light at Prospect and Center streets to put on his necktie. He was still adjusting it when he had to let go and drive on.

Truck Talk

It isn't uncommon to hear all types of whistling, when an attractive "femme" walks by, and automobile horn honking are also a daily occurrence but when a tractor-trailer driver makes the exhaust crack resembling a terrific wolf-call, then you have something new. At first we thought it accidental, but after he leaned out to look at three different members of the weaker sex and it happened all three times, right on schedule, we figured he really had that truck saying "uncle."

Lunch Counter Mirrors

Mirrors along a lunch counter are certainly handy gadgets and they save a lot of neck twisting when the stream of customers start pouring in. You can eat in peace, well almost in peace, and yet keep an eye on those customers arriving. One nice thing is you can see just when to duck for a bite and thus avoid a long-winded conversation when you are in a hurry.

Costly Cone

In a letter received recently by a friend here, a Marion man, now in service in Italy, told of stumbling upon an ice cream store while on a furlough in a small Italian town. He stopped in for a bit of cold refreshments and before he could get out of the store his craving had cost him $6.60. He then explained that exactly 65 youngsters had seen him enter and followed him inside. He said he couldn't bear to stand there and have them watch him eat a cone when they were so pathetically eager for some too, so he treated them all.

Optimist

We heard about one avid victory gardener who has delusions of becoming a modern Jack of Beanstalk fame. The gardener, a well known business man, planted beans in his garden and carefully put in stakes as the tender shoots could be kept in shape. According to the report the stakes are much higher than normal beans ever grow.

More Than Enough

Kent Hohenstein, advertising manager of Heiney and Cooper's drug store, had been asking his landlord for soil with which to replace the dwindling top on his lawn. After several requests, he finally asked for several baskets full, hoping to get at least a start. When he went home the other day his yard contained two large piles of dirt, more than he could ever hope to use. When neighbors inquire Kent says he is anticipating entering on the stuff and is just stocking up.

Pace Relaxed

It certainly is comforting to walk along the street and see the fine array of easy strides that people are walking with nowadays since a bit of elastic is being put back into underthings. It used to be people were afraid to walk very fast for fear the drawstring or button would pop and it was almost worth two trips from the store carrying just one sack at a time, if the other hand was left free to make a hasty grab if necessary.

Chicken Came First

That old question which came first, the chicken or the egg, popped up again, this time in The Star's composing room. A few-weeks-old chick was found wandering in front of the office the other day and was brought inside. George Sorreles of Green Camp, linotype operator, offered to take it home with him since the owner couldn't be found. He carefully placed it in a box and returned to work. The next time he looked, an egg almost as big as the chicken was also in the box, placed there by a practical jokester friend.

MARION TEAM PICKS UP

THEIR record as of Monday afternoon — 15 wins and 21 losses — may not provoke any exclamatory superlatives regarding their ability and power but the Marion Cubs look as good as any team in the Ohio State league, which is furnishing baseball fans with all varieties of thrills in its first season since 1941.

The Marion club Sunday decided it had been residing in the league basement for quite long enough so promptly pushed up one notch in the loop ladder to fifth place, displacing the wilting Zanesville Dodgers. Four Ohio State circuit teams have better records than Marion but that doesn't mean that they now are any better than the locals of Grover Hartley. They undoubtedly were for the first week or ten days of the season, which found Marion struggling valiantly to win a ball game but failing in its first six attempts.

Since that six-game losing streak was snapped in May, the Cubs have played .500 ball, which isn't bad considering the keen rivalry which exists in the six-team circuit. Since they won their first game of the campaign by defeating the Middletown Red Sox, Marion has been as good as any team in the league. That's a mighty positive statement but from the comparative performances of the various teams at Lincoln Park here it's accurate.

Maybe the locals don't look so good on their road trips but that's generally the case with professional baseball teams as well as practically all athletic outfits, amateur as well as the play-for-pay brand. A team usually does much better on its home floor, diamond, gridiron or what have you, with the support of home town folks instead of the jeers and taunts of "foreign" fans.

What is the reason for the vast improvement of the locals? Could be nothing but the working agreement with the Chicago Cubs, you say? You're dead right, friend, nothing but. The Cubs have been "feeding" the talent-hungry local club with players ever since the agreement was signed and sealed in late May. And it's starting to pay dividends. Eddie Labanara, the baseball-wise second baseman, Third Baseman Don Phipps, Shortstop Bill Broukal, Center Fielder Bill Morneweg and Left Fielder Lou Funk, among the regulars were all supplied through the Cub farm system. And the pitching corps has been greatly strengthened by Cub products. Latest arrivals are Pitchers Eli and Alvin Crow, both Cub property. Crow was scheduled to join the club in Lima for the five-game series there.

And the upswing in the quality of Marion play is resulting in bigger and bigger gates at Lincoln Park. The season's biggest paid attendance, 1,075, saw Sunday's doubleheader with Springfield, and last week, some of the biggest week-day crowds of the season showed up despite discouraging weather conditions. In contrast to early in the season when spectator spirit was lagging, the fans now really let loose with cheers and other familiar baseball "noises" at games. That's a sign that from the standpoint of the spectators, baseball is heading in the right direction. The fans know the players better now and there's more of a "home town" spirit about the whole baseball set up here.

GET THE LEAD OUT OF YOUR FEET

SPEED, one of the essentials of a successful ball player, is noticeably lacking in the Ohio State league this year. Marion players and members of the other five teams have been anything but fleet-footed gazelles on the basepaths. As a rule, the Ohio State leaguers use their head in base running but this doesn't help much when you haven't the natural asset of swiftness. Many drives down the foul lines that normally would have been doubles or higher minor loops have gone for singles in the Ohio State league because the batter just did not have enough speed to make it to second.

The youngsters in the Ohio State loop playing the outfield have on many occasions demonstrated that they have not yet acquired that very helpful characteristic "Baseball Sense." In throwing to the wrong base, the State league flychasers have permitted many potential runs to reach second and third. Many tallies probably could have been averted by outfielders throwing the ball to second to keep a runner who had singled on first, instead of heaving the ball home in a vain effort to nab a runner who had already crossed the plate or had the throw beat a mile. But the kids have to learn and it takes more than a month in a Class D league for them to acquire all the tricks and finesse that are the attributes of a top-class player.

$1,000 Supply Co. Purse Split; High Returns on Mutuels.

CLOSELY-WAGED races, including a tie for top honors in the final and feature event, the $1,000 Marion Grain and Supply Co. stake for 15 trotters, and extraordinarily high returns on mutuel betting overshadowed any individual driving performances in last night's Little Grand Circuit program before 1,500 turf followers at the half-mile county fairground track.

Opposite to the two preceding night's circuit programs in producing brilliant driving displays, last night's harness race offerings resulted in three wins being the highest number recorded by any single driver. C. J. "Slim" Shillings of Columbus captured that number, winning the second race, the $300 2:1 pace by piloting T. J. Van, a chestnut gelding to heat victories and scoring a heat win with Indiana in the third and last race of the evening.

Friday night's program was highlighted by the five wins tabulated by Sep Palin of Indianapolis and Saturday night, Harry Fitzpatrick of Du Quoin, Ill., guided home seven winners for number one laurels. Last night's card was the fourth of the program.

The third race, the feature attraction, for the top purse of $1,000 resulted in a tie for first place between Charon Arleen, chestnut mare driven by Wright and Indiana Pete, brown gelding skippered by Mr. Shilling. No horse won more than one heat in the race. Charon Arleen copping the second and Indiana Pete knocking off honors in the first. Seniah finished third in the race by placing first in the final heat.

As usual the mutuels operated by George Reverman of Columbus received heavy play but they proved extremely generous in their returns to the players. The daily double, coupling T. J. Van and Indiana Pete, victors in the first heats of the second and third races respectively, paid off $135.80, which ranks second only to the opening night's card when the double returned over $149.

$115 Place Price

However, the cake-taker last night was not the daily double. It was the return on Fama, place horse in the first heat of the second race. Fama returned no less than $115 for a $2 ticket, by far the biggest individual race price in this year's meeting, which started last Thursday and which exceeds any price on last year's 15-night card. Other returns ran exceptionally high, the winners in several instances paying $15 or better.

It was reported that only one ticket was held on Fama in the second race and not a single show bet had been waged on the brown mare owned by A. M. Worline of Cardington and driven by Mr. Worline.

Tonight, what Frank Foster, general manager of this year's meeting and secretary of the Marion Trotting association, thinks will be one of the outstanding programs of the meet will be staged at the fairgrounds. In the limelight will be the free-for-all trot, starring some of the country's best trotters.

Volo Song Tonight

Heading the list of trotters in the $1,000 race is Volo Song, winner of last year's Hambletonian. The Song is owned by the Baker stable of St. Charles, Ill., and will be driven by Harry Fitzpatrick, ace Baker reinsman. Most prominent of the other horses in the field challenging Volo Song will be Blue Boy, driven by Jake Mahoney. Blue Boy last year posted a 2:01¼ top for the mile distance. Conchita, another entrant in tonight's free for all trot did the mile in 2:05¼ last year and Fez Hanover to be driven by Bob Plaxico of Canton turned in a 2:03¼ performance. Volo Song's best was 2:02¼ last season.

Indiana Pete took the lead in the second round of the fairground track and increased it to two lengths in the upper turn, winning by a length in the first heat of the third race. Pirella's Hope led at the start and at the half, after carding a time of 1:06. Charon Arleen was in front all the way in the second heat of the feature race, posting 1:07 for the first half. She won the race by a length-and-a-half margin. A third horse, Seniah, won the third heat which paid off $17.60, $5.00 and $2.80. The same order of horses the start and half, Seniah, Charon Arleen and Summer Son, were that way at the finish wire of the last heat of this race. The time was a mediocre 2:14¼ for the last heat.

Leads Whole Distance

T. J. Van led the entire distance in the first session of the second race. He did the half in 1:10½ and won by a length and a half. He won by the same margin in the second heat of the race but his lead was contested in the backstretch and upper turn by Silver X driven by the leading driver in last year's Marion meet, Gabe Cartnal. Silver X rallied from last in the first turn of the second half and wound up in place position. T. J. Van already had the race won by the time the third heat rolled around so was content with second spot in this canto. Fama, which paid such a big price when she placed in the first heat, won the last heat in 1:12¼ over the 9/16 mile distance.

Myrtle Maid, another comparative long shot, won the first heat of the opening race, taking the lead away from Peter H in the backstretch of the first round. Peter H made a bid in the upper turn but made another costly break. Myrtle Maid copped the heat by eight lengths. Peter H was in front at the start and half of the second heat, at one time leading by seven lengths. The gap was quickly closed and Peter H won by only a length over the strongly finishing Trouble Direct. The last heat was copped by Trouble Direct, the race winner, by the close margin of a head over Overtime.

Drawings Made For Country Club's Handicap Tournament

First round matches in an "Over and Above 100" handicap golf tournament have been announced by Ben Miller, acting pro at the Marion Country club. Deadline for first round contests is next Sunday.

A total of 31 preliminary matches have been arranged in the two flights of the tourney, 16 in the first flight for golfers whose qualifying scores were above 100 and 15 in the bracket for linksmen posting qualifiers under 100 for 18 holes. Bob LaMarche drew a bye for the first round in the below-100 bracket.

This handicap event is the first in an annual series of Country club tournaments, which will be climaxed in August and September with the President's handicap and club championship match play affairs.

Special prizes have been offered club golfers by local merchants for scoring on what are considered the toughest holes on long nine-hole course. The first golfer to card an eagle three on the Par 5, 481-yard No. 1 hole will receive a pair of slacks and the first birdie three posted on No. 2, a notorious 426-yard dogleg, will be awarded book ends. The first eagle three shot on the 500-yard No. 4 will receive a pair of shoes and a month's supply of milk and cream is the reward for the first golfer to score a birdie three on No. 9. No member is eligible for more than one prize.

BUCKEYE GRIDDERS LIST TACKLE FROM UPPER SANDUSKY

Tom Snyder Listed Among O. S. Hopefuls; Ashland's Dove Also Named.

By HAROLD HARRISON
Associated Press Sports Writer

COLUMBUS, O., June 13—Carrol Widdoes, acting head football coach at Ohio State university, has a brand new version of the wartime manpower problem—he has so many players he doesn't know what to do.

At least that was the situation yesterday when 105 boys showed up for the first summer practice.

And although this is Widdoes' first year as head coach of a college team, he showed an immediate knowledge of how to look on the dark side of the picture.

Despite obvious pleasure at the huge turnout, Widdoes, who took over at Ohio State when Coach Paul E. Brown went to the Navy, quickly doused his smile in a bit of gloom.

In the first place, he related, a great majority of the 105 are 17-year-old freshmen, wholly lacking in collegiate experience. His next worry was over the size of the squad—fear that he and his assistants might not be able to do a thoroughly complete job separating the outstanding prospect from the mine run in two weeks of summer drills.

Then he pointed out that many of the boys will be 18 this summer and may be called for military service before fall.

The list of incoming freshmen read like a roster of an Ohio Who's Who in high school footfall. It included:

Bob Brugge of Parma, a 195-pound halfback; John Motjzik of Parma, 190-pound end; Tom Snyder of Upper Sandusky, 189-pound tackle; Ollie Cline of Fredericktown, 200-pound fullback; Kendall Herron of Willoughby, 190-pound center; Kenneth Boxwell of Xenia, 180-pound fullback; Bob Dove of Ashland, a 165-pound halfback who is reputed to be a fine punting prospect; Bob Wallace of Massillon, 175-pound end; Joe Mascio of Ravenna, 195-pound fullback; Richard Jackson of Wellsville, end; end; Tom Keane of Bellaire, 180-pound halfback and touted as one of the greatest prospects ever to come out of the Ohio valley; M. N. Hamilton of Toledo Waite, 175-pound end; Dick Wandtke of Toledo Waite, 190-pound fullback; Trainan Dendiu of Campbell, 180-pound end; Robert Martin of Warren, 195-pound guard and Gene Janecko of Campbell, 158-pound halfback.

Cardinal Try Out Camp Opens at Lima Friday

The second Ohio try out camp of the St. Louis Cardinals will open at Holloran park, Lima, this Friday and continue through Saturday, the Cardinal office disclosed today. The annual camp at Red Bird stadium in Columbus is scheduled to wind up operations Wednesday.

Marion and vicinity boys are invited to the Lima try out school which is open to all boys between 16 and 23 who have played or are currently playing, American Legion baseball. There is no charge to attend the camp but boys living outside of Lima must provide their own transportation and pay their living expenses while there. Boys who are signed to contracts will be reimbursed for their expenses while in Lima.

Joe Mathes, supervisor of the Class B, C and D clubs in the Cardinals farm chain will be in charge of the Lima camp. The Lima Red Birds of the Class D Ohio State league are a farm club of the Cardinals.

Prices paid for many items by the Navy have decreased, the Office of Procurement and Material reported.

Reside Steals Home in 9th To Give Lima Birds 7-6 Wi

Special to The Star

LIMA, June 13—The Lima Red Birds, third place team in the Ohio State league, scored the winning run in the last of the ninth inning to hand Marion's fifth position Cubs a 7 to 6 defeat before 400 fans at Halloren park here last night.

The deciding tally was racked up by Neil Reside, Lima left fielder, who stole home with two out in the last stanza. Reside got on first by virtue of a walk issued by Pitcher Stan Ostrowski of Marion. Reside, who has pilfered ten bases in the last four games, then stole second and after Harvey Zernia flied out, went to third on an infield out by Third Baseman Tom Ivey. He came across the plate on a steal with Pitcher Ostrowski winding up in the box.

The second game of the five-game series will be played at Halloran park tonight, starting at 8:15. Another single game is scheduled for Wednesday night and a twilight-night doubleheader will be staged Thursday night. This twin bill will start at 6:30, one of the games being rescheduled from an earlier postponement.

Pitcher tonight will be Joe Hill for Grover Hartley's Marion team and Dave Roberts, a left hander for the Red Birds of Cliff "Runt" Marr.

Ostrowski suffered his second loss of the season last night as he was touched for nine hits by Lima batsmen. McKinnin was the winning chucker for Lima.

On other State league games last night, Middletown maintained a half-game first place lead by downing Springfield, 9 to 6 and Newark, second place team kept Zanesville's Dodgers in the cellar with a 14 to 4 victory. Marion leads Zanesville by a margin of game.

YANKEES DROP TO SIXTH IN AMERICAN

Senators Bif Champs, 4-3, on Powell's 11th Inning Single.

By The Associated Press

The world champion New York Yankees got biffed on the nose again last night and nosedived into sixth place in the American league, the first time in years the Yanks have been in the second division this late in the season.

When Jake Powell singled in the 11th inning to give Washington a 4 to 3 victory it marked the Yankees' sixth straight defeat and their 12th setback in their last 14 games.

The regulation game had ended in a 1-1 deadlock and it appeared that the Yanks were in when they scored twice in the tenth. But the Senators tied it up again in their half and proceeded to tag Atley Donald for the winning run in the 11th.

Donald had relieved starter Joe Page who pitched the first nine innings. Johnny Niggeling went the distance for the Senators.

In another American league night game Cleveland nicked Detroit 6 to 5, mainly on the strength of a five-run uprising in the fourth. Mickey Rocco and Oris Hockett drove in four of the five tallies in this frame, each delivering a two-run single.

The New York Giants spoiled Brooklyn four runs in the first inning then came from behind to wallop the Dodgers, 15 to 9, in the only National league game scheduled. Manager Mel Ott and First Baseman Phil Weintraub each socked two homers for the winners. Altogether Weintraub drove in five runs, his best day since his 11 RBI the day the Giants took Brooklyn, 26-8, a month ago.

The Chicago White Sox and the St. Louis Browns were tied, 1-1, after 2½ innings when rain forced a postponement. The other clubs in both circuits had an open date.

SEEDED LIST INTACT

By The Associated Press

DETROIT, June 13—The seeded list was intact in the national clay court championships today except for one player who didn't show up for a first round match at the Detroit Tennis club, and everything pointed to the pairings in Sunday's finals of Pauline Betz of Los Angeles against Doris Hart of Miami, Fla., and Francisco Segura of Coral Gables, Fla., against Billy Talbert of Indianapolis.

Indians Now Only 3 Games from Brownies

By The Associated Press

CLEVELAND, June 13—Sporting a record of nine victories in their last 13 games, Cleveland's Indians today had narrowed the gap between them and the league leading St. Louis Browns to three games.

After winning three out of four from the Brownies, the Tribesmen returned to the Lakefront stadium last night and spanked the Detroit Tigers 6 to 5 in the opener of a five-game series and moved up to fifth place.

Manager Steve O'Neill utilized his two aces, Hal Newhouser and Dizzy Trout, in an effort to salvage the contest but a five-run splurge in the fourth inning plus a brilliant relief chore by Allie Reynolds decided the issue.

Birds Endeavor To Shave Brews' First Place Lead

By The Associated Press

The Columbus Red Birds, who last night unleashed a 17-hit attack to whip the Milwaukee Brewers, 7-2, will try tonight to shave the lead of the faltering American association pace-setters to four games.

In other Monday night games, Louisville took a five-inning quickie at Minneapolis, 6-3, to slightly improve its third place edge over St. Paul whose home contest with Indianapolis was rained out, while Toledo rallied to edge the Blues, 6-4, at Kansas City.

Ad Managers Hold Jubilee in Columbus

By The Associated Press

COLUMBUS, O., June 13—Harry Gwaltney of the Milwaukee Journal, who founded the Association of Newspaper Classified Advertising Managers in 1920, was one of the principal speakers today as the organization went into the second day of its silver jubilee convention here.

Gwaltney was to speak on "ANCAM's Silver Jubilee."

Public housing projects were criticized yesterday by Malcolm H. Prine, president of the Columbus real estate board, who asserted they have done nothing for city planning and have not eliminated slums.

Other speakers yesterday included Arthur C. Johnson Sr., editor and associate publisher of the Columbus Dispatch, and Harvey R. Young, advertising director of the Dispatch.

Johnson commended the advertising men for their work in cleaning up false and unethical advertising.

Treasury Department receipts from amusement taxes were $168,746,625 in 1943.

YOUTH IS WOUNDED IN HARDIN COUNTY

Special to The Star

KENTON, O., June 13—Lavern Chamberlain, 18, today ruefully admitted that the fun of routing "petters" from Kenton's lover's lane along the Scioto river road, east of here, is ended.

The youth was shot in the right shoulder early Monday by a man whom he described as dark-complexioned with dark, wavy hair, and wearing a gray suit. He failed to get the license numbers of the black coupe in which the man and his companion were seated, and today officers have only meager clues to follow.

Chamberlain told Deputy Sheriff Ray Comstock that he had driven past the parked coupe once, turned around and was passing it the second time when the man fired at him with a pistol or revolver. The youth started speeding away after his assailant began turning the car around in an apparent effort to catch him.

B. Robinson, who was with the wounded youth, said he grabbed the steering wheel and kept their car in the road as Lavern slumped over the wheel in a faint. Yesterday the bullet, which had traveled through flesh of the right shoulder and grazed a rib before imbedding itself in the lower right side, was removed by a surgeon at McKittrick hospital.

Three Ohio Airports Will Be Completed

By The Associated Press

WASHINGTON, June 13—Three Ohio airports had a presidential green light today for resuming construction designed to fit them for emergency use. The fields originally were recommended for inclusion in an army program but work was stopped subsequently.

The airports are at Canton, Mansfield and Springfield.

The civil aeronautics administration said last night the municipalities sponsoring the fields already had entered into site purchases and made other commitments and that little if any critical material will be required to complete the work.

If New York City's school children and teachers were to march by in parade formation, it would take 90 hours for them to pass.

BUYING RUSH HITS MARKET

First Hour Volume Is 649,000 Shares, Largest Turnover of Year.

By The Associated Press

NEW YORK, June 13—The stock market experienced another rush of buying today which pushed prices generally to new five-year peaks.

First hour volume of 649,000 shares, largest in a year, attested to the breadth of demand but as happened in yesterday's big market, buyers showed particular interest in shares of companies already counting on huge backlogs of civilian business with ending of the war.

Early advances ranged from fractions to around 2 points but as the leaders encountered an increasing flow of profit selling near the fourth hour there was some retreat from the highs in a few parts of the list. There were further big-block transfers of low priced motors and specialties. The automobile shares, steels, rails, equipments, amusements, store issues and higher priced industrial manufacturing stocks paced the move.

NAZI FURY AGAINST JEWS SHOWS NO END

By The Associated Press

WASHINGTON, June 13 — President Roosevelt told congress yesterday that as a final Nazi defeat approaches "the fury of their insane desire to wipe out the Jewish race in Europe continues unabated.

"This is but one example," Mr. Roosevelt said in transmitting a report on arrangements for caring for war refugees. "Many Christian groups also are being murdered.

"Knowing that they have lost the war, the Nazis are determined to complete their program of mass extermination. This program is but one manifestation of Hitler's aim to salvage from military defeat victory for Nazi principles—the very principles which this war must destroy unless we shall have fought in vain."

The President outlined recently-completed arrangements to bring about 1,000 refugees to this country for temporary housing in a military camp near Oswego, N. Y. After the war, he said, these refugees, mostly women and children, will be returned to their homeland.

Mr. Roosevelt said the work of the war refugee board, composed of the secretaries of state, treasury, and war, has "brought new hope to the oppressed peoples of Europe."

Facilities for caring for war refugees in southern Italy have become so overtaxed, he added, that unless arrangements to move them on can be made the escape of other refugees will be "seriously impeded."

WHEAT PRICES UP IN STRONGER MARKET

By The Associated Press

CHICAGO, June 13 — Wheat prices moved up as much as two cents at times from low points and rye was even stronger today on reports that conditions in sections of the southwest were conducive to rust.

The war food administration said it could not now estimate how severe damage to wheat would be, but added it expected some fields of soft wheat and late hard wheat in Texas to be affected. Rust spores were said to have been spread to Oklahoma, Kansas and Missouri and to southeastern Nebraska.

The advance in wheat prices apparently was brought about by short covering which disclosed a scarcity of offerings. Short covering and stop loss buying was evident in the rye trade.

LOVE'S FAIR HORIZON

By ADELE GARRISON

INVOLUNTARILY I hesitated at my young son's proposal. Not that I did not welcome it. I was deeply gratified, not only because of his care of me, but because it gave me an excuse to avoid another trip with Hugh Grantland through the darkened attic to the secret chamber where Lee Chow lay. There had been something in Hugh's deep sigh as we stood for a second in the darkness before he switched on his flashlight, and in the strong yet tender grip of his hands upon my arms, which had made me reluctant to repeat the trip while he was in his present mood.

Explanation

Yet I wished to explain my change of escorts to him in plausible fashion. I had waited an instant too long, however, for I had not realized as I should, the quickness of perception which normal youth possesses.

"Perhaps you don't want me to go," he said, his voice betraying both disappointment and pique. "I guess Uncle Hugh's waiting to take you back."

I knew from experience how consuming the jealousy of a young boy or girl superseded by an adult can be, and I spoke and acted swiftly.

"You know that's nonsense," I said severely. "Of course I want you to take me back. Uncle Hugh brought me down, and he waited because he thought you boys might be busy. I didn't expect to go back to the secret chamber again tonight. I wouldn't, except for this signaling business. Wait here. I'll tell Uncle Hugh I have to stay down here two or three minutes and that there's no need of his waiting for you will take me up and bring me back again. All right?"

"Okay!" he said, his face glowing, his voice enthusiastic, and I went quickly down the corridor to where Hugh stood waiting for me.

Explains

"Sorry to have kept you waiting, Hugh," I said. "But there's something I have to do down here for several minutes and I know you're anxious to get back to Lee Chow. Junior will escort me up and down. Indeed, I believe he's quite counting on it."

"Not as much——" Hugh began quickly; then, finished his sentence in exceedingly lame fashion.

"As Roderick does," he added, then gave a sardonic little laugh. "I hope they don't exercise their rivalry over some tow-headed lass at school," he said, "or they'll be having popguns and milk for two some fine morning."

I was standing in a position where I could look toward my son without moving. Hugh caught my uneasy glance and smiled cynically.

"He couldn't possibly have heard," he assured me, and indeed he had kept his voice low. "But I'll be getting back. We'll expect you up, or, rather, down, when?"

"Probably in five minutes," I answered.

Casual Comment

"Au revoir, then," he said, and turning went through the door to the attic stairs. I went back to my son with a carefully casual comment.

"I fancy Uncle Hugh was glad to get back to Lee Chow when I told him I had to stay down a little longer."

"Oh, ye-ah!" Junior replied, and I almost made the mistake of putting into speech the astonishment, with a touch of shock in it, which had swept me at his words and tone.

"Yes, I am sure he was," I said, trying hard to put no surprise or criticism of his tone into my answer. "And now, if you don't mind, I wish you'd run down to the basement and see if the wires leading to that gong are firmly joined to the main ones."

"Gee, Mums!" my young son said with an amused grin, "You're quite the big shot electrician, aren't you?"

There was affectionate derision in his tone, which I welcomed, hoping that it had erased from his mobile mind the bored, derisive query which he had but a minute before tossed at me.

But I could not so easily dismiss his tone and words from my mind. I remembered the reference he and Roderick had made to the days of Hugh's last visit to us, when but a few hours ago, they had declared that Hugh did anything I asked of him. That speech had been given with childish carelessness. This last slangy response, with its disappointed, faintly resentful comment just before it, held much more. Was it possible that my young son, no longer a child, was putting two and two together, remembering that old time with a keen clarity of brain—and an exaggeration possibly only to extreme youth—and linking it with the present? Was he, perhaps, watching jealously every incident, every nuance and mannerism on Hugh's part—and on mine?

I knew that I was the one who was inflating a toy balloon to the dimensions of a dirigible, but I could not repress the storm of rage which shook me, rage directed against Hugh Grantland for putting me in so anomalous a position. I could have screamed to high Heaven, but instead, I did the only thing possible and spoke to Junior calmly as he emerged from the basement.

"Well?" I said smiling. "What is the head electrician's verdict about the wires?"

Poison Ivy Pointers

The season for poison ivy and poison oak is here again and the woodsman, or the plucker of wild flowers, or even the golfer whose ball happens by an unfortunate accident to get into the rough provided he is susceptible to the ravages of the plant will begin to gaze in suspicious anticipation at the skin of his hands and wonder if that little blister will grow into a great eruption.

Ivy dermatitis affects only susceptible individuals. Many attempts have been made to devise a serum which will produce immunity either for prevention or treatment, but not with any conspicuous success.

Other methods of prevention have been aimed at washing off the resin which the plant leaves on the skin at the earliest possible moment. The offending substance is very sticky and tenacious, so much so that ordinary soap and water will not remove it.

Experiments have been made to determine how effective the chemicals often employed to remove the resin from the skin are. The experiments were conducted in the following manner.

Fresh green leaves of the poison ivy plant were gathered by a person not sensitive to the plant. A portion of the leaf was bruised by rolling it between the thumb and each finger depositing as near as possible an equal amount of oleoresin on each finger. Then a volunteer who was known to be sensitive to poison ivy allowed his skin to be lightly stroked by a finger on which the oleoresin had been deposited. No visible stain or moisture could be seen on the skin of the stroked area, but in spite of this, if left alone on the skin of a sensitive person a typical poison ivy dermatitis resulted going through the stages from redness and inflammation to blister formation.

The first preventive used was laundry soap and running water. In different experiments the contaminated skin was washed at intervals varying at one, five, ten, fifteen, thirty minutes, an hour and two hours after being touched. The results varied with the degree of sensitiveness of the volunteer. Those who were used to having mild attacks were completely prevented from reaction provided the washing was done within one minute. But if as much as five minutes elapsed the eruption was just as severe as if no washing had been done. In a highly sensitive subject no prevention of eruption was accomplished no matter how soon or how vigorous the washing.

In all of these experiments the volunteer was stroked on both arms. Only one arm exposed to washing or chemical application. The other arm was left as a control.

Chloride of iron has been used as a preventive application, but in these experiments a 10 per cent solution of ferric chloride applied to the site of contamination at varying intervals did not prevent the subsequent eruption or diminish its severity. An ointment of ferric chloride, calamine (10%), zinc oxide (10%) and talcum applied to the skin before the contamination was made resulted in restored severity of the eruption.

Potassium permanganate 10% aqueous solution applied in the same way did prevent the eruption in most instances and reduced its severity in nearly all, even if applied as long after exposure as five or ten minutes. This seems to be the best preparation for this kind of prevention. But in highly sensitive individuals even it fails.

Sodium perborate did not prevent the eruption and white petrolatum made it worse due to the solubility of the ivy oleoresin in oily mediums.

The reputation which many of these preparations had is based on freedom from discomfort on field trips and under these circumstances no one can be sure that he has really been contaminated by bruised plants. The experiments here recorded were certain and exact.

Mummies found in Mammoth Cave, Ky., have been identified as of pre-Columbian times, possibly 1,500 years old.
